"Singing Fool" Most Successful of Films

BOX OFFICE GIANTS

Which is the most successful box-office picture of all time?

According to an American estimate, it is "The Singing Fool." One of the first sound pictures, this Warner film has grossed 5,000,000 dollars in world rentals.

This figure has never been equalled by any sound film. The nearest rival was that epic of the silent days, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Rudolph Valentino's most famous film, which took 4,500,000 dollars in world rentals.

D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," which has always been regarded as perhaps the greatest money-maker in film history, actually realised 3,500,000 dollars, a figure equalled by the first all-talkie, "The Jazz Singer."

"Ben-Hur," which had the longest run in history, grossed 4,000,000 dollars.

LAUGHTON'S IDEA.

Commenting in an interview on the recent trend toward intelligent films, Charles Laughton said: "It is significant that such pictures, once considered certain box-office failures, are now the most successful. After all," he added, "audiences are the best critics. If a picture is good, people will go to see it."

Laughton believes the day will come when motion pictures follow the experience of the stage in bundling together a group of players who will appear in a series of films. He recalled the success of this method at the Old Vic Theatre in London, where he appeared with a group of stage stars in a number of plays, each running a month.

"We became so accustomed to each other that we achieved complete harmony. When the curtain went up we each knew exactly where the other would be, what he would do, and how he would react to certain conditions. We could mould and blend a scene therefore. It was a great experience. I'm sure that could be done in films also, with happy results."

GEORGE O'BRIEN'S BRITISH PICTURE.

The second of a series of adventure pictures being produced by Sol Lesser and Major John Zant, starring George O'Brien, will be produced in London.

The first, "The Dude Ranger," is being photographed at Zion National Park in Utah, and the second, "The Cowboy Millionaire," will take the production crew to London. The cast, outside of O'Brien, will be chosen from British players.

STAGE SUCCESS FOR SCREEN.

British and Dominion announce the production of a film based upon Margaret Kennedy's "Escape Me Never," which finished recently at the Apollo Theatre, London, after playing to capacity houses throughout its entire run.

Elizabeth Bergner will recreate the star part for the film. Dr. Paul Czinner will direct.

HIS FIFTH WIFE.

Police Justice Cameron, of Birmingham, New York State, has announced that he performed the marriage of Kenneth Harlan, the film actor, and Helen Spelner, a dancer, recently.

On June 24 Kenneth Harlan asked for an annulment of his marriage to his fourth wife, Phyllis McClure, on the grounds that the wedding took place after he "had partaken too freely of intoxicating

BRITISH DIRECTOR'S REWARD.

James Whale, the young British director, has just received a new contract with Universal. It is a reward for Whale's work in making "One More River," from the last John Galsworthy novel.

James Whale was the producer of "Journey's End" on the stage, and the director of the film. Shortly afterwards he was signed by Universal, and has since directed "Waterloo Bridge," "Frankenstein," "The Old Dark House," and "The Invisible Man."

U.S. DIRECTOR FOR BRITAIN.

William Beaudine, the Hollywood director, is coming to Britain shortly, and will direct a feature film at the B.I.P. studios at Elstree.

William Beaudine directed many Hollywood films, including "Make Me a Star" and "Three Wise Girls." He has directed such American stars as Jean Harlow and Joan Blondell. He has had over 30 years' experience of the film world.

MENJOU TO MARRY AGAIN.

Adolphe Menjou and Vera Tansdale have given notice of their intention to marry (says Reuter from Los Angeles.)

They arrived at the register office barely 24 hours after the decree granted to Menjou's former wife, Kathryn Carver, was made absolute.

Vera Tansdale has appeared in many recent films, including "Roman Scandals," "Fashion of 1934," and "Madame Dubarry." Adolphe Menjou is 44.

THE STAMMERING ACTOR

G.B.S. Puts Question to Lecturer

SPEAKS PLAINLY ON STAGE

Mr. Bernard Shaw, while at Malvern in connection with the Malvern Festival, was an interested member of the audience at a lecture in connection with the New Health Society's Summer School, by Mr. St. John Rumsey, instructor for speech defects at Guy's Hospital, London.

After Mr. Rumsey's lecture, Mr. Shaw said that he wished to ask a question about an actor, who, he added, was now performing at Malvern Theatre.

"For ordinary speech," said Mr. Shaw, "he has apparently an in-correctible stammer, but on the stage not only does he not stammer, but he cannot stammer. At the beginning of his career, authors and producers and people of that kind, finding that he stammered, gave him stammering parts, a horrible thing for an author to put on the stage, because people will always laugh at stammering."

"Well, he was given parts of that kind, and he could not stammer when he wanted to. What is the explanation of that?"

Mr. Rumsey said the explanation was that when the actor was on the stage and saw a room full of people, instinct told him to send his voice across the room. The moment he was not on the stage he thought of his voice again.

STAMMERING "EXPERT."

"Thirty years ago," said Mr. Rumsey, "a stammering expert took a large residence in the Midlands, and took everybody in, because he realised that the stammerer might be able to speak on the stage. He only let the parents come down when the stammering pupils were doing amateur theatricals, and the parents used to go and see their children speaking fluently on the stage, and the 'went back to London delighted.'"

Mr. Rumsey, in his lecture, warmly praised the elocution of the Prince of Wales.

"The Prince of Wales," he said, "is a great example of how to speak. Anybody who has heard him broadcast knows that he is quite a slow speaker, and uses very short phrases. The result is that he carries his audience with him right through his speech. Most people talk so fast that you only hear part of what they say."

Mr. Rumsey said that he had come across quite a lot of stammerers who did not want to lose their stammer.

"I had a boy pupil," he said, "whose father was very wealthy. The boy was very fond of games, and never did much work at school. When his father brought him to me, he said to the boy, 'Now, get rid of that stammer, and you can come into the office and learn your job, and one of these days you will be a partner.'"

"I could not get the boy to lose his stammer, and the reason was obvious."

Soviet Taking Place In Politics Held By Czar's Regime

FRIENDSHIP WITH GREAT BRITAIN

FEARS OF GERMANY BRING FRANCE CLOSER

Moscow, Sept. 19.
A new grouping of European powers in which the Soviet Union is taking a position interestingly similar to that occupied by Imperial Russia in 1914 to-day was exciting keen interest in diplomatic circles here.

Bonds of friendship are strengthened among Soviet Russia, France and Great Britain. Again, as in the year preceding 1914, fear of Germany is driving these three nations into each other's arms.

Twenty years ago it was the grey-green troops of Kaiser Wilhelm II and his "Mittel Europa" expansion policy that caused Great Britain, France and Russia to form the Triple Entente. Now it is the brown-shirted forces of Adolf Hitler and his apparent determination to bring Austria under the sign of the Swastika that are having a similar effect.

Several recent events have shown which way the diplomatic winds are blowing.

Until the Nazis captured power in Germany, that nation was Soviet Russia's best friend. Millions of roubles were spent by Russia on German machinery and the technical services of German engineers. German was the most popular foreign language in Soviet schools. Relations between the two powers were extremely cordial.

Meanwhile, Soviet leaders regarded France and Great Britain as the arch-plotters for the overthrow of its communist economic system.

CHANGE OF VIEW.

But the Nazi's war on communism changed all that. For eighteen months German-Russian relations have grown constantly cooler. Addressing the All-Union Central Executive Committee last winter, Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff said these relations were "so bad as to be unrecognizable."

The Soviet Union began looking for other friends. Starting with the visit of former Premier Edouard Herriot of France to Moscow last year, Franco-Russian relations have been constantly improving. Recently a group of French scientists visited the Soviet Union and were entertained like potatoes.

M. Litvinoff, who rarely consents to be interviewed, recently granted this privilege to a prominent French journalist. France stands as the Soviet Union's sponsor for membership in the League of Nations. The two countries are now discussing, with every prospect of success, what would amount to a defensive military alliance.

CORDIAL WITH BRITAIN.

Anglo-Russian rapprochement began only recently, but is proceeding apace. The change in tone of the Soviet press since Sir John Simon entered M. Litvinoff's pet project, the Eastern European Security Pact, before the House of Commons, is an interesting illustration of the way organs of public opinion are controlled by the Government here.

Before Sir John's speech, the Soviet press could find little to commend in the British Isles or its people. Now, suddenly, the British have become an excellent race, led by wise and discerning statesmen.

Significant also is the recent agreement of Moscow and London to exchange military attaches, something they had never done since the revolution.

DANGERS OF SLIMMING

DOCTOR'S WARNING TO WOMEN

The danger of slimming was pointed out at the New Health Society's Summer School at Malvern, recently by Dr. John Collins Campbell, who said that slimming diets covering 14 or 28 days were

"CHAMPION" MOTHER.

Mrs. Antal Grammer, a 48-year-old Hungarian, has been awarded the title of "champion mother" by the St. Stephen Day Committee of Hungarian Mothers. Married at 16, she now has 21 children, more than any other woman in Hungary. The committee awarded the title to Mrs. Grammer during a distribution of medals and money grants to 6,000 mothers who, between them, have 80,000 children.

HUMAN OSTRICH DISCOVERED

STRANGE DISCOVERY AT INQUEST

It was stated at a Battersea inquest, on William Leslie Field, prisoner in Wandsworth Gaol, that he died in St. James's Hospital, Bulham, after swallowing three horsehair balls.

The deputy medical officer of the prison, Dr. Charles Stacey, said that the man was admitted in February 1933, convicted of living on the immoral earnings of women. He was in good general health, but had an operation two years ago.

"He told me that this operation was because he had swallowed pins and needles," said Dr. Stacey. "He was put under observation when he arrived in prison, but his mental state was found to be normal. When he complained of stomach pains I asked him if he had swallowed anything. He said he had not, but he thought the pains were due to things he swallowed before going to prison."

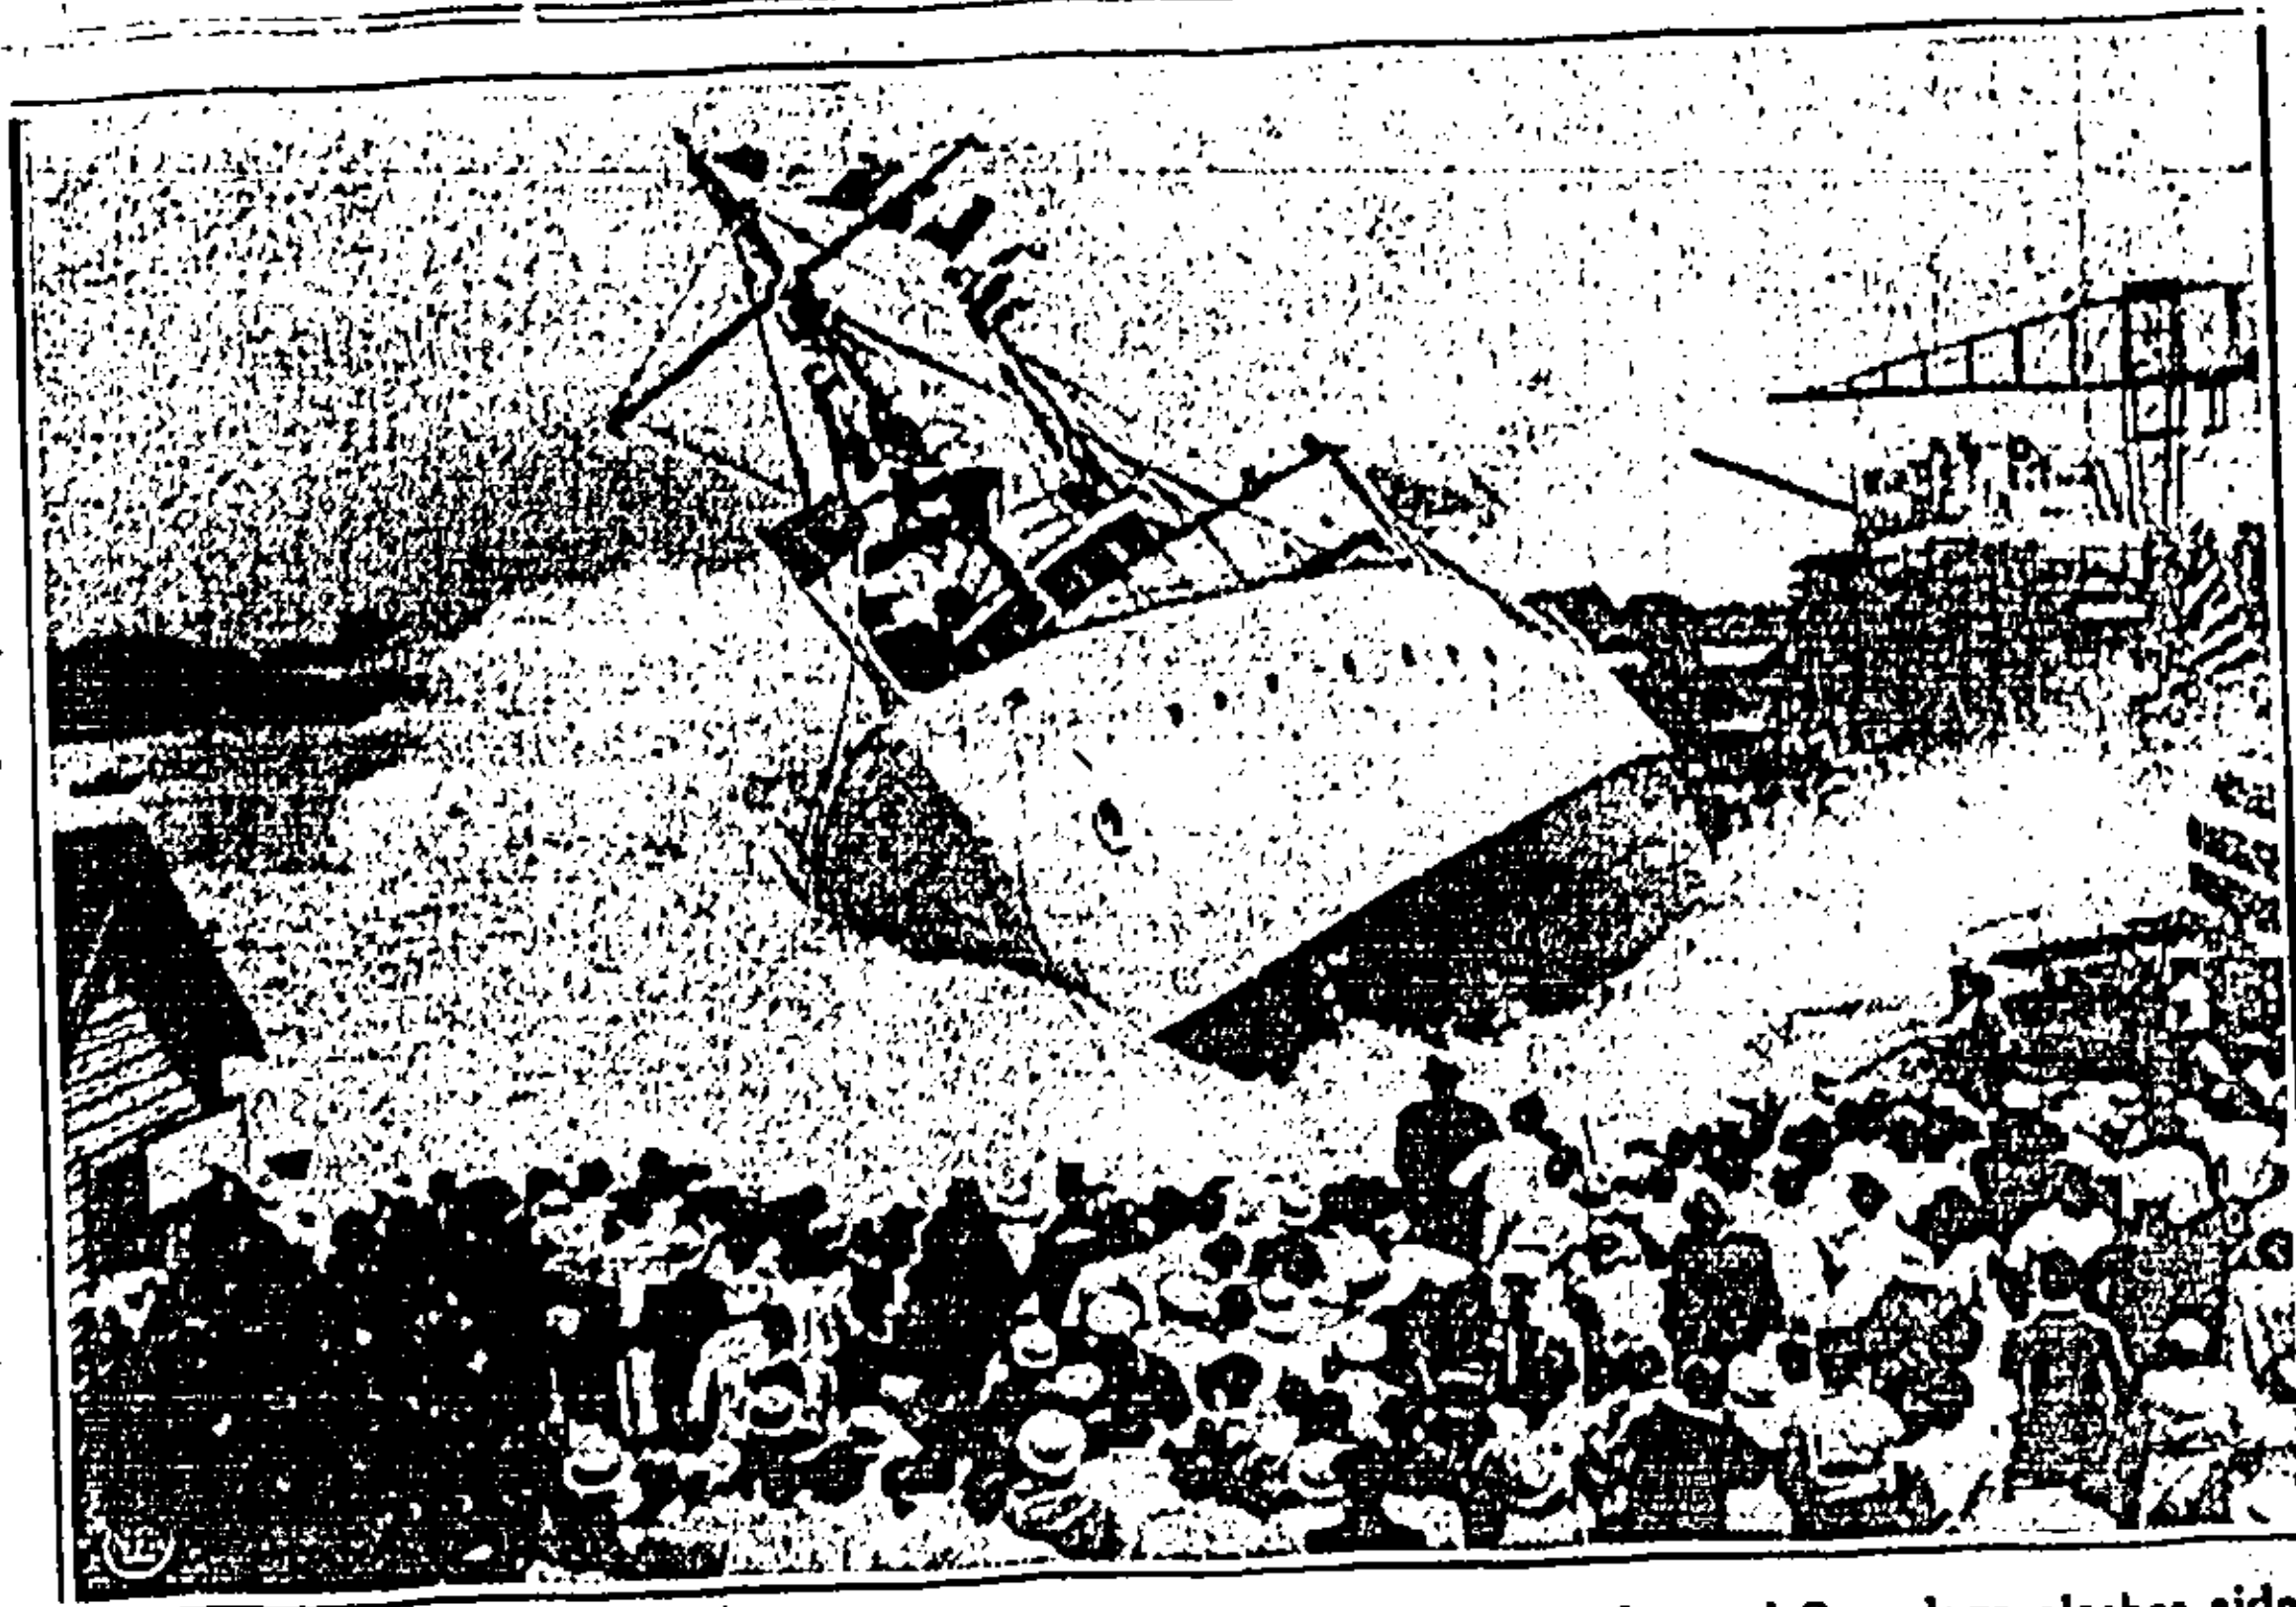

The Deputy Coroner—Had he any access to horsehair material while in prison?

Dr. Stacey—No. The only horsehair material is in the officers' beds, and he could not possibly have had access to them.

Dr. McCormac, medical officer at St. James's Hospital, said that the man was very ill when admitted and died the same day. A post mortem examination showed that his death was due to obstruction caused by three small horsehair balls in the abdomen.

The man's mother said that her son left home seven years ago. She had a letter from him last year telling her he was in prison and when she visited him he said he had stolen money.

The Deputy Coroner said:— "This is a very puzzling case. There is evidence that the man swallowed needles and safety pins in order to escape work and to be removed to hospital. It is possible that he swallowed a lot of these foreign bodies, including horsehair, but there is no evidence of mental disease. I record a verdict that he died as a result of the obstruction caused by horsehair balls self-administered, and there is no evidence to show the state of his mind."

In a mighty shower of foam and spray, the new U.S. Coast Guard vessel Onondaga slashes sideways into the waters of Saginaw Bay at Bay City, Mich., in this launching ceremony, a baptism witnessed by hundreds of spectators. She is a 155 foot craft, of 11,000 tons gross displacement.

LOURDES CURE

Woman's Remarkable Recovery

Cured, it is claimed, of paralysis, dumbness, deafness, and a sure resulting from an operation. Mrs. Madeleine Dodd, aged 47, the French wife of Mr. John Dodd, a native of Edmondshyres, Durham, has returned to Paris from Lourdes after a stay of five days.

Mrs. Dodd, who lives at Rue des Martyrs, Montmartre, Paris, was operated on for cancer of the breast at the British Hertford Hospital in Paris in April last.

Subsequently, paralysis of the right arm and left leg set in, she became deaf and dumb, and had been bedridden for three months. A week ago she was transported to Lourdes and on arrival was so exhausted that she had to have injections.

After she had been there three days and had bathed three times in the water, Mrs. Dodd discovered, she states, that she could walk again. She began to talk, she could hear, and doctors found that the sore on the operation scar had closed up.

Her ability to use the right arm again was, Mr. and Mrs. Dodd told Reuters, the most wonderful thing, seeing that the nerves had been cut below the shoulder during the operation for cancer.

"Neighbours could not believe their eyes when I returned from Lourdes unaided," said Mrs. Dodd. "The Committee of Doctors at Lourdes has certified Mrs. Dodd's recovery, describing the case as a remarkable one, says Reuters."

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Dodd took place at Frampton, Cumberland. Mr. Dodd is employed at a Paris factory.

almost inaccessible to foreigners, spent three hours talking with the well-known British author and journalist, Mr. H. G. Wells, who is being extensively entertained by the Soviet Government.

extremely dangerous, and might do great harm to the functional organs.

"If it takes 14 years," he said, "to put on a certain amount of weight, you cannot expect to take that weight off in so many days, without doing a lot of harm. It is quite normal for a man or woman to increase a little in weight towards middle-age, and women, particularly, must expect a certain amount of extra flesh, to give those rounded contours which characterise the female form."

"The rage for slimming, in which the ideal of the schoolgirl is aimed at, is nonsense for a mature woman, and is certainly not healthy. A woman should not worry too much about putting on a little weight. It is quite natural, so long as it does not go beyond a certain point.

"If a woman finds that she is putting on weight too rapidly some dietetic means should be taken to stop the deposits, but great care should be exercised in deciding how this should be done."

EXPERT ADVICE ON MEALS

FOR THOSE OF ELDER YEARS

While the term "old age" is necessarily an elastic one, and while some "old" people enjoy quite a good appetite and digestion, it is true for the majority that with the advance of years comes a lessening of the powers of eating and utilising food.

Dr. Robert Hutchison, the well-known expert on food and dietetics, writing in the August issue of the British Journal of Physical Medicine, sets out a suitable diet for those who have difficulty in digesting their meals.

He recommends small, dry meals, with drinks between rather than at meal times; soups and sloppy or bulky foods are barred, and crisp toast or "cracks" are urged in the place of bread. The chief meal, it is suggested, should be in the middle of the day.

The scheme of diet set out is as follows:—

Breakfast—Dry toast with butter, a lightly-cooked egg or a little white fish. A teaspoonful of tea or coffee with a little milk or cream, sweetened if desired.

Midday Meal.—Two courses only—fish and meat, fish and a sweet, or meat and a sweet. Fish should be boiled or steamed—not fried. The sweets permissible are plain milk pudding, baked custard, junket, or stewed fruit. A little mashed potato or boiled rice is allowed, but no vegetable except spinach or cauliflower tops.

Ten—One cupful of weak tea with milk or cream, sweetened if desired. No solid food.

Evening Meal.—Always a light meal. Boiled white fish and a potato, or toast and butter, or bread and milk, or a lightly-cooked egg.

At Bedtime.—A small cup of soup and a finger of toast, or a cup of Benger's Food, Allenbury Diet, &c., or a little whisky and water with a biscuit.

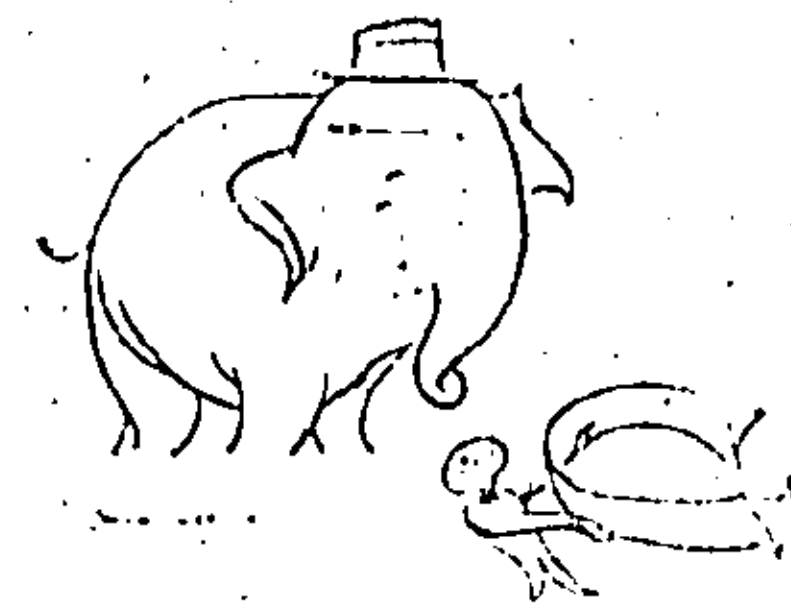

"What he drinks is," says Dr. Hutchison, "to the old man, just as important as what he eats."

A small cup of China tea is recommended as the best drink at breakfast. At lunch and supper he should have a glass of sherry or a tablespoonful of whisky or brandy in a wine-glassful of hot water slipped slowly at the end of a meal.

Shanghai is shortly to ride in comfort in the new Settlement ricksha, approved by the Ricksha Board, of the Municipal Council. The rickshas are equipped with pneumatic tyres and springs of good quality and are actually weather-proof. The vehicle is red, with black trimmings and nickel-plated lamps.

ENGLAND AND LOTTERIES

Of the issues of lesser importance which are to come before the Conservative Party Conference next month none is more interesting than the question of a national lottery, facilities for which are to come up for discussion. So far, there has been no indication of the official Conservative attitude on this question, but the mere fact that it is to figure on the agenda is sufficient to show that it is regarded as coming within the sphere of practical politics. The system of State lotteries, so common to Continental countries, has always been frowned upon by certain groups at Home, the argument of those who oppose such a method of raising revenue being that it tends to spread the spirit of gambling and that the State should not have resort to such sources in seeking to implement its income. A point which is conveniently forgotten, however, is that the State at present derives considerable revenue from betting taxes. The mere fact that betting is legal is a tacit admission by the State that people will gamble, and, recognising that point, the Home Government sees no reason why those who indulge in the practice should not contribute to the State by means of the special tax which is levied. Even if betting were illegal, there can be no questioning the point that, human nature being what it is, gambling would still persist. There is, actually, a good deal of hypocrisy and cant on this question of lotteries; the Continental attitude is certainly more frank and logical. The continued popularity of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, despite the obstacles which are placed in their way in England, is further proof of the point that the gambling instinct will find a means of expressing itself. The fact may be regretted, but it is a fact none the less. It is probable that the huge amounts raised by the Irish sweeps are factors influencing the Conservatives to toy with the national lottery idea, but, well-based though their viewpoint may be, there can be little doubt that opposition will be voiced by that element which reflects what is popularly known as the Nonconformist Conscience. Another idea which has no more than one occasion been advocated in England is the premium bond plan, in which investors are content to take a low rate of interest by

NOTES OF THE DAY

COST OF SECURITY

If the staggering cost of the world's armies and armaments could be tabulated and a positive total of expenditure arrived at, it would probably be discovered that one year's outlay would be sufficient to wipe out the greater part of the international debt of the world, and thus remove one of the greatest obstacles in the way of trade revival. It would almost certainly disclose that the amount required for each day of the year, to pay troops and seamen, build battleships, aeroplanes, submarines and tanks, would be sufficient to meet the annual requirements of the League of Nations. It is a remarkable fact, when it is remembered that the League of Nations is the only piece of peace machinery in operation continuously, that the nations are so careful of their little contribution to Geneva, and so watchful of its utilisation, while they are so open-handed, indeed reckless, in spending the money of the people for arms and munitions. When statesmen suggested some years ago that the League of Nations might very well organise an international police force, with land sea and air units, so that the scrapping of national navies and the disbandment of armies would be possible, there were actually some who cried: "What will it cost?" And before they got an answer, added: "We can't afford it."

COSTLY ECONOMY

It can be argued that the armed forces of the world are necessary for the preservation of peace and that their cost is therefore not unreasonable. But it must be admitted at that same time that if the cause for suspicion between nations were removed, if the causes of fear and hatred and jealousy were eradicated, the necessity of these costly armed legions would be gone and the task of disarmament advanced to fruition. Since the League of Nations is the world's best hope in this task of peace-making, it surely merits the generous financial assistance of the powers. It should be the first, and not the last duty, of member Governments, to provide the funds for their contribution to Geneva. If they practise economy in that direction, they may find it ultimately a most costly saving. A year's fee to the League would not pay for one day's war.

BALANCING THE BUDGET

Taxpayers in the various countries have the consolation of knowing that no budget in the world is more carefully scrutinised at every turn than that of the League, and that there is little room for waste at Geneva. All the League's activities, spreading to every part of the world, have to be carried out at a total annual cost of about one-seventh the cost of a single battleship. From the fact that the newly published audited accounts show a surplus at the end of 1933 amounting to nearly 1,200,000 gold francs, it may be deduced that those who are responsible for League expenditure have done their job well. As a matter of fact, this result is all the more creditable in view of the unusual difficulties experienced in collecting the money due to the League from its states-members. Exchange difficulties, of course, have affected many other organisations and business concerns in addition to the League. Countries with no intention of defaulting have not found it easy to pay their contributions in the gold currency which can be used by the League. It is not surprising, in the circumstances, that some had not completed their 1933 payments by the end of the year. The League auditor, in his report, recognises that this was a "temporary state of affairs". With the improvement in trade and more settled conditions, financial worries may be lightened very speedily. The League, in point of fact, has not had to wait long for a good proportion of the money owing to it. Early in 1934, outstanding amounts began to roll into the Geneva coffers and, of course, current contributions are being paid as well. The League is not yet in danger of bankruptcy, but it cannot afford to lose a penny of the contributions due to it. Nor can the world afford not to pay its Geneva bills.

reason of the chance of substantial prizes in the periodical drawings. Something along these lines would no doubt make a wide appeal. If the Old Country were to resort to any of these methods of raising funds, there would undoubtedly be a demand locally that Hongkong should come into line. With indications that the public will subscribe at least $30,000 to the Picnic Bay Sweepstake, Hongkong's predisposition to indulge in a mild "flutter" in the hope of personal gain is established beyond all doubt.

BRITAIN'S PROFITS FROM INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL

When the gold standard lapsed in September, 1931, the Bank of England's policy changed from credit restriction to expansion, industry found itself able to borrow money for industrial development. By March 4, 1932, practically all the credit obtained in America, was repaid. This was six months ahead of schedule. A few months later, the £50,000,000 loan was liquidated. So, too, was the French credit of a like amount. Then came the War Loan conversion scheme, the greatest financial transaction the world has ever known. The immediate result was to curtail still further the spending power of all bondholders, but that transaction paved the way, in a manner only vaguely foreseen, to the speeding up of industry. While the War Loan was producing five per cent, thousands of business organizations with surplus capital were content to invest in this secured stock rather than attempt industrial expansion for hypothetical reward. The conversion put an end to this tendency. Industry and business were forced to use their own resources to make profitable trade. So the thawing-out of frozen capital was accentuated. Government stock lost its appeal. There was ushered in an era of industrial rejuvenation. The ban on foreign lending helped to speed it up. Money piled up in the banks. The bank rate came down to 2 per cent for the first time in thirty-five years and interest on deposit accounts was reduced to ½ per cent.

A building boom started, and here was a natural outlet for capital with an assured security, and this explains the phenomenon so puzzling to visitors who have noted the intense building activity going on all over the country—not a town, village or hamlet being exempt. Between £80,000,000 and £100,000,000 a year has been advanced to finance the building of homes, and the Building Society movement alone has been the medium of providing borrowers with almost £1,000,000,000.

This is only one side of the picture. Greater sums have been expended on the creation of new factories and new plants; units in the nation's economic cog which are creative and, in the long run, reproductive. These operations have been the outcome of demand for the modernization of industry. In the process, there has been a remarkable shift in industry from north to south, as well as interchange of location in the Midlands. Great Britain is to-day reaping the benefit.

Many entirely new concerns have started, a large number impelled by the need to get within the tariff walls England has built up. Statistics, issued in London, show that in 1932 there were 255 public and 9,949 private companies registered, making in all a total of 10,204 concerns, with a cumulative nominal capital of £70,000,000. This movement continued to expand in 1933, for the number of public companies registered was 330 and private companies 11,054, giving a total of 11,384, with aggregate nominal capital of £100,000,000. There is ample evidence that statistics for the current year will travel considerably higher, for this business development is integral with Great Britain's recovery.

One of the most amazing changes the years have wrought in national psychology has relation to saving. The need of thrift has got hold of the people. It is taught in every school. Week by week almost every schoolchild buys a 12-cent stamp from the schoolmaster. The stamp is stuck in a book and when the value in stamps reaches the requisite figure a National Savings Certificate is bought, or the money is deposited in the Postoffice Savings Bank. Between February, 1916, when the National Savings Movement was started, and May, 1934, 1,186,544,485 National Savings Certificates were sold. They represent a value of £1,000,000,000, and the total sum which the small investors in England hold in national savings is £2,500,000,000. Students of political developments are inclined to forget what a sheet anchor to stability this enormous aggregation of capital, held in the homes of the workers of Great Britain, means.

The Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna fixes the declaration of monetary policy issued immediately after the collapse of the Economic Conference last year as epoch-making. It was signed by representatives of almost every part of the Empire, including the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"This statement," he says, "formally adopted the principle of a managed currency with a view to maintaining a stable price level. It noted that the persistent adherence of the United Kingdom to the policy of cheap and plentiful money had been increasingly effective in raising wholesale commodity prices."

"The declaration may well prove to be the most important profession of faith that the world has yet had on the subject of monetary policy. It accords with an immense advance in public appreciation of the conditions of modern business life. The price level of commodities in daily use is recognized as the measure of stability in the value of money, and the maintenance of such stability is the proper objective of monetary policy."

"The Government's policy of cheap and abundant money, primarily embarked upon for the special object of converting national debts to lower interest rates, has been in force consistently for two years. The success of the policy in maintaining the general average of prices at a level which renders production profitable is to-day beyond question."

"World trade may still be disorganized, the exchanges chaotic, international dealings hampered by prohibitive tariffs, quotas and other restrictions; yet, notwithstanding all these obstacles, often described as insuperable, the trade of Great Britain, by universal acknowledgment, has for some months been making steady and gratifying progress. The abundance of short-term money and the higher prices of securities encourage conversion of debts to lower interest rates, while expanding trade, both directly and indirectly, through its strengthening of confidence, stimulates further capital development."

"Thus the flow of business runs more smoothly through a whole series of channels. New money finds its way into industry. The supply of an adequate quantity of money is now seen to be as certain in restoring trade and employment as the curtailment of the required supply is certain to restrict them. "These are the first fruits of our new-found independence in monetary affairs."

The Very Idea!

THIS WATER POLO
By Eddie Kelly, Swam Songster

TWENTY-SIX, we notice, won the Interport swimming without participating in the Water Polo.

We don't blame them. Water polo is only for people who want their bodies recovered after they are drowned. Otherwise they'd simply jump off the Star Ferry in the harbour.

This game has a tremendous vogue in the Y.M.C.A., as many as seven or eight men trying out in an endeavour to make the six-man team.

It is even more popular with the doctors who specialise in eye, ear and nose troubles. They make frequent donations to the sport (and collect larger ones from it).

It is played in a swimming pool or ocean which should be at least seven feet deep at both ends, in order that no one can stand on the bottom and rest when he is about to go under for the third time. It has to be seven feet because most water poloists average about six feet high and weigh 275 lbs. Men smaller than that go in for football, wrestling and boxing and other mild sports.

The principle of the game is roughly the same as football—to grab the man with the ball and prevent him from carrying it to your goal.

This is done by holding him under water until he lets go of the ball, and tearing his bathing suit off so that he will not dare appear on the surface in the presence of ladies.

The best thing to be said in water polo's favour is that it is not an overemphasized sport, a player having the shortest season of any known type of athlete.

On the average, he lasts a week and a half, and then decides to devote his time towards drinking, and having his lungs reined.

Another good thing in favour of water polo players is that they don't talk you deaf about their exploits. Anyone who has played in more than two games isn't able to talk at all.

DELIGHT

One of the most successful social functions yet held at the Kowloon Cricket Club attracted a crowd of over 100 members and friends yesterday evening, when a cocktail party was staged.

Tables were arranged around the main hall and dancing was enjoyed to the strains of the Aloha Serenaders, a talented new combination of local instrumentalists and vocalists.

The Serenaders, who were enthusiastically received, played the following programme:—"Across The Sea," "Hano Hano Hanaele," "When The Moon Comes Over The Mountain," "Hoale Hula," "Hilo Hana Kai," "Little Grass Shack," "Palolo Hula," "Hawaiian Love," "Na Ale," "A Stands For Aloha," "What Aloha Means," and "King's Serenade."

The event was part of the extensive social programme recently arranged by the committee. On Saturday week, the club holds its first dance of the new season, when Fred and His Pals will be in attendance, and a record crowd is anticipated.

ISAKO CIRCUS

200 EUROPEAN
ARTISTS

One of the biggest shows ever to visit the Colony, Isako's Grand Russian Circus and Menagerie, is due to arrive early in October. Some indication of its size can be gathered from the fact that there are two hundred European artists, over three hundred animals (including ten elephants) and fifty trained horses.

The circus is recognised as one of the best on tour to-day, there being few countries which it has not visited. Amazing feats are performed by Cossack horsemen, while the flying trapeze work is undoubtedly of a high standard, judging from Press reports. There are, of course, the hundred and one attractions which add to the lure and the glitter of the old-time "sawdust ring."

RESTAURANT FIRE

SMART WORK BY BRIGADE

Fire broke out on the first floor of 83 Namchung Street, Shamshui-po, at 3.40 this morning. The premises were occupied by the Tung Po Restaurant.

Smoke was issuing in dense volume from the rear portion of the premises, when an alarm communicated to the main station at Kowloon brought a number of engines on the scene.

The outbreak was confined to the floor, and within half-an-hour it was extinguished. Considerable damage to furniture and goods was caused, however, an estimate by the proprietor placing it at over $700.

IN LETTER

Alleged libel, false and defamatory to the Hongkong Police Force, in that it referred to bribery as having been practised by members of the Force, in connection, it was sought to show, with sly Japanese brothels, was the subject of Police action taken before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, when committal proceedings were commenced against Goro Gurata, an unemployed Japanese photographer, of 87 Jaffe Road, Wanchai.

There were two charges against the defendant. The first related to the allegation that on August 31, he published a false and defamatory libel concerning the Hongkong Police Force, in the form of an anonymous letter to the Inspector of Police, Hongkong, which contained the following: "All these heads are the best friend of the Police Dept. of Wanchai are under the influence of bribery." The second charge, similarly worded, concerned an anonymous letter to the "Protector of Chinese," Hongkong.

MURDER

him in a cemetery last March.—United Press.

New York, Sept. 20. A $10 gold certificate, presented for payment for petrol at a Bronx garage, was the first clue which led to the arrest of Hauptmann. The manager of the garage jotted down the number of the car and hurried to the bank, where the certificate was identified as one of the ransom notes.

The Attorney General's Department has indicated that it will move swiftly to prosecute Hauptmann on a charge of murder and kidnapping. An official added, however, that the severe penalties for kidnappers would not apply in this case since the law imposing them was not enacted until after the abduction of the Lindbergh baby.

MAKE NO COMMENT.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, who are in California, would make no comment when informed of the arrest of Hauptmann and of the police suspicions.—Reuter.

NOTES IDENTIFIED.

Washington, Sept. 20. Police have arrested a man named Hauptmann in whose home were found $13,750 in ten and twenty-dollar bank notes, known to be part of the original $50,000 ransom paid by Colonel Charles Lindbergh during the search for his kidnapped baby.

Hauptmann is an alien, having come to the United States in 1923 as a stowaway.

NATIONAL SENSATION.

The arrest of Hauptmann in the Bronx district has caused a sensation throughout the country. A crowd of six hundred gathered outside Hauptmann's house, and police supervision was needed to keep it in control.

Hauptmann had told his neighbours that he was a cabinet-maker who had been out of work for two years, but neighbours say he went to a Wall Street broker's office daily.

A taxi-driver has identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a dollar to deliver a note to Dr. Cronin's home soon after the latter was announced as a negotiator.—Reuter.

KIDNAPPING RECALLED.

The story of the Lindbergh baby's kidnapping and subsequent murder, and the finding of the little body on the Lindbergh estate many days after the child was snatched from the nursery of Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh's home, shocked all America and the consequent nationwide hunt for the abductors was the most widespread—and enormously organised—in the history of the country.

The child was asleep in his crib in the Lindbergh's Hopewell, New Jersey home, when it was stolen. The muddled marks of moccasins found in the nursery through the window by a roughly-made ladder, Colonel Lindbergh, when he discovered the loss, called on the police at once and the news was flashed to every police station in the United States.

Three days after the child's disappearance, a note demanding $50,000 ransom was received by the frantic family, which informed them that although the child was safe it would be killed if anything "went wrong." Within a few hours, a man called Colonel Lindbergh on the telephone, said he was one of the kidnappers and discussed the terms of the ransom. A meeting-place was arranged where the money was to be paid over.

RANSOM PAID.

It was on March 1 that child was kidnapped, but it was not until April, and after further lengthy negotiations with the criminals, that Colonel Lindbergh, having requested the police not to intervene, paid $50,000 through intermediaries to the gang. The notes were in fifty-dollar denominations. But the child was not returned.

On June 12 the baby's body was found in the grounds of the Lindbergh estate. The skull was fractured and the death had occurred some weeks before. Many arrests were made, but the crime was never brought home to any one of those taken into custody.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE
THEATRES

Low Ayres has the enviable task of making love to Alice Faye in "She Learned About Sailors," the Fox comedy-romance coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday. Low is the champion boxer-brother of the U. S. Navy and Alice is a night club entertainer in the picture. This gives Alice a splendid opportunity to sing "Here's the Key to My Heart" in a manner that is reminiscent of her "Nasty Man" number in George White's Scandals. Aiding, and abetting these two with the comedy are those knockout slapstick artists, Mitchell and Durant, who are Low's shipmates in the picture, and Harry Green, a South American impresario. The story takes them from an Asiatic port, through the vicissitudes of life in a shipboard to a cafe in San Pedro, California. Mitchell and Durant act the stage for an accidental meeting of the lovers in Los Angeles, and when something goes wrong, they force both lovers into a trumped-up marriage. There then follows a series of hilarious events that brings the film to a lively conclusion.

"Tarzan and His Mate"

Drama that appeals to the eye can be as forceful as drama that appeals to the intellect. In fact, the eye is the inlet to the brain just as is the ear. Which principle, according to Cedric Gibbons, famous art director, who now makes his debut as a director of drama, makes possible the use of a vast amount of pictorial knowledge to embellish the thrills and romance of "Tarzan and His Mate" new adventure picture now showing at the Queen's Theatre. For years Gibbons' business has been the art of "dramatising" buildings, rooms, landscapes—designing the sets for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. Sometimes he designed settings in subdued hues and quiet tone so as not to intrude on the spoken drama. At other times he designed garish spectacles that themselves told a story. For years he has made an intensive study of fitting his settings to his drama; his achievements range from the huge settings of "Ben Hur" to the intensely dramatic settings of "Grand Hotel." He recently created the "house made out of a barn" for "When Ladies Meet." Gibbons has studied drama of the screen with settings primarily in view, and eventually has come to unconsciously link the dramatization of eye-appeal and reason-appeal together.

In his first picture with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan and Neil Hamilton, the original triangle in "Tarzan, the Ape Man" reunited in a sequel to Edgar Rice Burroughs' jungle thriller, he has worked out a number of novel ideas along this line. Paul Cavanagh, Boris Lloyd, William Stack, Desmond Roberts and Nathan Curry are also in the cast.

"It Happened One Night"

That "It Happened One Night" which is now showing in the King's Theatre, might possibly have emerged as anything but the grand entertainment it really is, is a prospect hardly compatible with the film's great cast, story and great director. How, for instance, could the picture fail to "click" in the parlance of the studios, with Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, co-starring together for the first time on the screen, in the leading roles, with Frank Capra directing, the same Capra that gave motion pictures "Lady For A Day," "American Madness" and "Platinum Blonde," with Robert Riskin writing the screen play based on the "Comopolitan Magazine" story by Samuel Hopkins Adams. It was evidently to be expected that "It Happened One Night" would rank high among the year's best. That it has surpassed even the most ambitious estimates is a tribute to the fine acting of the two stars, the direction of Capra, Riskin's sparkling script and the elaborate production afforded it by the Columbia Studios. The supporting cast, as in every Capra-directed picture is excellent. Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Alvin Hale, Blanche Frederici, Ward Bond, Mickey Daniels, George Bruckston, Father Lord and Irving Bacon are all to be seen and even the minor bits are played by seasoned and experienced trouper. "It Happened One Night" can be listed as the best picture Gable has done; the best picture Colbert has done, and the best picture Capra has done.

"Wonder Bar"

A near approach to a motion picture musical number has been attempted to "Goin' To Heaven on a Mule," which Al Jolson sings in the First National screen version of "Wonder Bar," which will be shown at the Alhambra Theatre to-morrow, according to Harry Warren and Al Dubin, composer and lyricist of that Warner Bros. musical spectacle. Both in its musical treatment and in its screen presentation, they say, the number is unique. They mention it as the most interesting, at least to them, of the five songs they created for the production. "It's in the Jolson tradition" and at the same time it's more modernistic than the Chicago Fair," said Warren. "It's a sort of semi-spiritual, a brother of the Jolson items to be used in the film in 'Vive La France' with which he entertains the guests of this enormous continental night club from the floor. Aside from the five original Warren and Dubin numbers, Jolson will revive "Dark Eyes" of his previous song successes, in somewhat new guise. "Wonder Bar" is the internationally famous musical drama with spectacular numbers created and staged by Dusky Berkeley, which 300 beautiful girls take part. Others in the all star Louise Fazenda and Fifi D'Orsay.

A report comes from the New Territories that Cheung Wa-po, a farmer, at Tung Shing village, was yesterday drowned by falling from a boat. His body was not recovered.

RACING SEASON RE-OPENS: SATURDAY'S OUTLOOK

ALL EYES ON PICNIC BAY STAKES

WARNING TO PUNTERS: SOME UPSETS EXPECTED

PONIES NOT FORWARD ENOUGH TO GIVE OF THEIR BEST

FEW OF THE LIKELY WINNERS

(By "Captain Foster")

The majority of us will be wending our way eastward to the Race Course at Happy Valley to-morrow afternoon and, given fine weather, which I very much doubt we shall have judging by the present outlook (Wednesday afternoon), a very large crowd will muster to see a very good afternoon's programme of nine races. There will also be the added attraction of the big sweep, which will be drawn for in the Picnic Bay Stakes, the seventh race on the card. The lucky drawer of the winning ticket will be receiving a very tidy sum in Hongkong Silver! But I shall not be surprised to see well over 90,000 tickets, if not the entire 100,000, tickets sold before 3 p.m. on Saturday next!

With regard to the racing, I am prepared to see a few upsets, and would therefore counsel caution to the habitués of the Park. We have had a break of three and a half months, and, after the rest, quite a number of ponies are not sufficiently forward in condition to give their best running.

Take Electric Star for instance: she is undoubtedly the outstanding pony of the Meeting, and the only "A" class runner competing. On form she should enter away with the Big Wave Bay Handicap, the opposition not being in her class, but as she strikes me as being on the heavy side, I shall not be surprised to see her "go under" solely through lack of condition. If the course is heavy, I think she need fear nothing but on firm going I can see considerable danger coming from Ribble, a vastly improved pony and in fine fettle.

BIG WAVE BAY HANDICAP.

I have already given you my views of Electric Star. On a good course I am inclined to pick Ribble as the winner as I do not think Electric Star can give him 18 lbs. at the moment. On a soft course the Kong mare should have an easy passage and win, as she is good in mud while I have an idea that Ribble does not relish the going if the ground is soft and heavy. High Speed is going nicely and might very easily fill the third position. I think it will be a toss up between him and Soldier of Germany. Spinaway may come in to the picture if the course is heavy but I fear not otherwise. The sixth starter will be Macaroni but I do not fancy him for the race.

CORROBOREE HANDICAP.

I gather seven Australians will face the barrier for this event, and a very thrilling race should result. To a good start, I think we need not look beyond Atlas for the winner. He is exceptionally fast over a short distance and, if anything, I feel he has been somewhat leniently weighted with 162 lbs. I am a little fogged over by Able Amazon and Boblink Star as I understand the stable jockey will be riding Boblink Star. Able Amazon looked well and finished strongly last Wednesday morning and if she does not actually win she must be amongst the placed ponies. This is more than I can say in regard to Boblink Star, but I may be proved wrong. Nell Gwyn is my fancy for the third position.

JUNK BAY HANDICAP.

This is a race confined to Novices, and there will be at least ten ponies competing. Although he has never run into a place in nine starts during the first half of the season, Racing Place impresses me very much, and strikes me as a very improved pony. He is a shapely looking animal and fills the eye and, if his racing capabilities are as good as his looks, I think he will make light work of his burden of 168 lbs and win. I gather he has pleased his connections who are optimistic with his chances. My old deceiver Racing Triumph is in the race but I am definitely through with him. Win or lose he shall have no support from me. Our old friend Boxing Eve is to be reckoned with and provided he gets a good start, I cannot see him out of the hunt at the finish. Holter Skoller, King's Parade, No Fear, and Warrington (all winners this

These ponies have been doing useful work and will strip in good condition. I make the race very open.

SUB GRIFFINS AUTUMN PLATE.

This will be our longest race of the afternoon and should also provide a good finish. Copper Idol is my choice as I think he is in better racing condition than Cavalcade. Classic Hall has come on a great deal during the past fortnight and may spring a surprise by winning, and The Badger should not be neglected. St. Ives pleases in his morning gallops but so far he has never reproduced his training performances on race days when the Colours are up. If in a galloping mood to-morrow afternoon, he is capable of being in the picture at the finish. Surprise is a good pony but went wrong towards the end of last season. He is reputed to be sound again and in good hard condition. Were I to look for an "outsider" I would pick him.

ISLAND HANDICAP.

Another interesting and open race should result in this event. Beta is reported to be a "rod in pickle" here. Frankly, I have not seen him at work but if he is good fettle he must be dangerous. His last outing was in the Smugglers Handicap (six furlongs) which he won in the very good time of 1:29 4/5 by beating Ribble, a head. This performance should make him respected to-morrow afternoon. Budge also has high credentials and cannot be overlooked. Then we have Lemberg, The Tiger and Valorous who require watching. Personally I am inclined to support Valorous who appears to be very well at the moment. The question is how good are the new griffins, Beta, Budge and Lemberg in comparison? Budge I like immensely and feel sure that he will run a good race.

TWEED ISLAND BAY HANDICAP.

As far as I can see a select field of eight ponies will contest this race. Frankly, I am not impressed with the way Soldier of China is moving and for this reason I will eliminate his chances here. I expect, however, to see an interesting contest between Brechin, Bright View and Gladiator and will plump on them as being the placed ponies. I am very partial to Gladiator and will make him my choice but I do so with very little confidence, knowing how exceptionally well Brechin is moving these days.

PICNIC BAY STAKES HANDICAP.

Now we come to the piece de resistance of the afternoon. Excitement will be high, not so much on account of the race itself but on account of the draw for the big sweep which is run on the race. For myself I shall be extremely satisfied if one of my numbers should draw Colombo, Hey Tor or Vago as I think these three ponies will be fighting it out at the finish. I prefer Vago's chances the best of all.

ALDRICH HANDICAP.

Wayward Stag strikes me as being the pony to follow for this race and Glad Eyes should also be supported. An upset is quite likely to occur and, on a good hard course, I do not think William Oser should be neglected and, on a soft course, Partnership should be considered.

VAUCLOSE HANDICAP.

I feel that the pony that finishes

They Say—

THAT Prima Donna may not start to-morrow.
THAT Bronze Era—on account of leg trouble—will definitely not compete to-morrow.
THAT Electric Star is considered an almost certainty in the Big Wave Bay Handicap.
THAT Valorous has a very good chance of annexing the Island Bay Handicap.
THAT The Tiger will be right on his heels and most probably beat him at the finish.
THAT Atlas will be ridden by Mr. Deitz.
THAT he will most probably canter away with the Corroborree Handicap.

FINE NEW SUBS

MANY PONIES OF REAL PROMISE

BEST SUPPLIED IN YEARS

(By "Captain Foster")

The subscription griffins for next year arrived last Sunday morning, and I was agreeably surprised at the good condition in which I found them.

A sea voyage usually takes a lot out of the animals, and I was therefore quite prepared to see a very sorry sight when I inspected them that evening at the Stables, more especially as the ponies were confined to a hold of a steamer for eleven days which was the time taken from Dalny to Hongkong. The stamina of a China pony is proverbial and he appears to regain his condition after a couple of days rest combined with good feeding. The contrast between him and an Australian pony is amazing. The latter appears more delicate in constitution and requires infinitely more time to recover his strength after a voyage.

GOOD LOOKING SUBS.

I was most pleased with the appearances of the new subs, and I think I can safely say with an exceedingly fine lot of ponies. I do not recollect ever having seen a nicer batch and I cannot help thinking that we shall see some fine gallopers amongst them.

Although there was no pony of the calibre of Racing Boy, I feel that the subs of 1933 were the best supplied in recent years; they were a very level lot, with no outstanding pony, and produced very keen racing. It is to be hoped that our new lot will prove a level consignment. The ponies will be seen in action at about noon on Monday next (21st) and will be drawn for that evening at the Paddock, Race Course. I have taken a very special fancy to Nos. 52 and 106, and hope it will be my good fortune to "draw" either one of them.

WEARY QUEENS OF TENNIS REALM

The strain of championship tennis play is shown in the faces and the postures of Helen Jacobs (left) and Carolin Babcock, at the conclusion of a fast match in the women's tournament conducted at Forest Hills. The girls were opponents in the final contest for the women's national singles title, and teamed together in the doubles final.

Experts' Hot Tip For 1935 Derby

BOBSLEIGH'S PROMISE

London, Sept. 13.
Bobsleigh is the present hot tip for next year's Derby. Experts declare that he is the best two-year-old in the country at the present time. Bookmakers are cautiously offering odds of 10/1 against him for the great classic.

Bobsleigh ran green at the Ascot meet, his first appearance, but at Goodwood at the end of July, he won the Richmond Stakes in smashing style. He was a 1/3 favourite at the off, and rumped home by four lengths.

OWNED BY LORD DERBY.

The colt is the property of Lord Derby, who is lucky to have such a good animal to step into the racing plates of his Derby winner Hyperion, now retired. Bobsleigh possesses much more range and scope than Hyperion did at the same age. There is nothing flash about this chestnut colt, but when you come to look him over carefully you find it exceedingly difficult to pick a hole in him. Materially, he is superbly bred. His dam, Toboggan, was herself a brilliant racing mare, winning the Oaks and the Coronation Stakes. The mare is by Hurry On out of Glacier by St. Hurry from Glasalt by Isinglass—a good playing pedigree.—United Press.

There are only two mares in the consignment.

POLICE SEIZE RACE HORSE

BELIEVED RECORD BREAKER

Nice, August 21.
Suspected of being the mysterious racehorse which surprised French turf circles by winning the Prix du Palais Bourbon in record time, with a profit of £4,000 to someone "in the know," a horse was seized by the police here today.

The mysterious coup was effected on the English race-course on Saturday. An unknown animal named Hallelucourt won the Prix du Palais Bourbon, a race reserved for horses which have not won £150 in prize money, in a canter at 32 to 1.

KING UNLUCKY NOT TO BEAT CORBETT

CHAMPION EXTENDED BY A WHIRLWIND HITTER

DECISION MADE DIFFICULT: DEFENSIVE CHAMPION

London, Aug. 21.

It is not often that a championship fight ends in a verdict of a draw. But Mr. Charlie Thomas, the referee at Clapton Stadium, last night failed to decide between Dick Corbett, of London, and Johnny King, of Manchester, who were fighting for the British and British Empire Bantam-weight Championships, help by the former.

Although I was rather inclined to think that King had won—chiefly for his enterprise throughout the 15 rounds—I can understand the referee's difficulty.

It was a moderate fight and perhaps on the whole a draw suited the occasion. Corbett, of course, not having been beaten, retains his title.

I have certainly seen better and more interesting fights for a championship than this one. No doubt it suffered from the fact that perhaps having their fourth championship meeting they knew too much about each other.

KNOW THE REPLIES.

They knew the moves and the replies to them like two well-matched chess players.

Corbett is the more scientific performer and with the moral advantage of being the champion was expected to play a predominant part, but for at least two-thirds of the bout he was strikingly apathetic and unenterprising.

Although he is an extremely clever exponent of the straight left, King brought so much fire and dash into his own methods that the champion was more concerned in defence.

The best work accomplished by King, who was the more aggressive, was done by his right hand, which he brought down on Corbett's face and jaw over a score of times during the fight.

Even towards the end, when Corbett must have felt that his throne was trembling, he showed no striking desire to assert himself and in the last round he was unable to reply effectively to the determined hustle of his rival.

DISAPPOINTING.

It was an extremely disappointing display indeed, for the London crowds naturally expected Corbett to be at an advantage on his own ground after having beaten King twice out of three fights at Manchester.

When I saw Corbett training the other day at Windsor he appeared almost at concert pitch and full of pep, but he seemed indifferent last night.

It was now and then, when King stung him with his right-handers, that he displayed anything like the form a champion should.

King is not a very tactical fighter—most of his stuff is plain and above board—and his skill is more in the direction of hard, honest-to-goodness scrapping.

HEAD FIRST INTO ROPES.

He was a hard trier all through. Sometimes Corbett by clever ducking and evasion put him at a disadvantage, and on one occasion he went head first through the ropes after a tricky side-step by the champion.

He landed good punches to the body, too, and I noticed that at the beginning of every round came out hustling and bustling from his corner.

Where so much in other respects was evenly balanced this showed good ringcraft. Because of this and his more persistent attack I put fancy King won. Certainly he put up excellent claims for yet another tilt for that crown of Corbett's.

I gave five rounds to King, four to Corbett, six rounds even.

M.C.C. AND THE AUSTRALIANS

A VERY LACONIC STATEMENT

"A meeting was held at Lord's to-day between the sub-committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club and Messrs. H. Hushby and Bull, representing the Australian cricket team. Opportunity was taken at this meeting of discussing cricket matters generally prior to the departure from England of the Australian representatives."

Exciting End To Cowes Week

NUMBER OF BOATS OVERTURNED

Cowes Week came to a dramatic end when a series of misfortunes in a heavy gale and torrential rain were added to the familiar racing thrills of the regatta.

The gale grew worse during the day, and the race for the big yachts was cancelled.

Veronica, owned by Sir William Burton, who was at the helm, had been racing for about five minutes when a squall struck her and smashed the main boom. She managed to turn about and return under a small head sail.

Shortly afterwards, Major Harold Hall's Hushline was dismantled and towed in by Lord Forester's motor-yacht Marama. The motor-yacht put back immediately to assist an 8-metre yacht, Siskin, owned by Messrs. Kenneth Preston and Robert Steele, which had also lost her mast. She struggled in unaided, however, an sufficient of the mast remained to hoist a few yards of sail.

FILLED WITH WATER.

Mrs. A. Vines, with two young women as crew, was preparing a 14ft. sailing dinghy for the Town Regatta race when the craft was struck by a fierce gust of wind. The dinghy heeled over and filled with water, but her air tanks kept her afloat with the three clinging on desperately.

She was swept away by a fast ebbing tide, and four motor-boats set off in a race for life. As she drifted into angry seas off Egypt Point, there seemed to be little hope for the dinghy, but the motor-launch Siro, which was acting as tender to the committee boat, arrived just in time.

Later, four international 14ft. sailing dinghies capsized in rapid succession. They included Mr. Stewart Morris's R.L.P., which has just returned from the International contests at Toronto, and another craft owned by Mr. Christopher Ralsey, son of the noted Cowes sail-maker.

The crews were picked up by motor-boats.

During the afternoon the order was given for the yachts to take down their strings of flags. It was an order which has rarely—if ever—been given at the regatta.

And it was an order which brought to an end Cowes Week, 1934.

ANOTHER TENNIS WIN FOR BRITAIN

GERMANY BEATEN IN CLOSE INTERNATIONAL TIE

ENGLISH PLAYERS' SUPERIORITY IN DOUBLES DECIDES

Great Britain beat Germany by 13 matches to 11 in the two-day international match at Hanover last month. The match was closely contested throughout. At the end of the first day the countries were level at 6-all, and during the second afternoon the score was level at 9-all. Germany took the lead at 11-9, but were robbed of victory when Great Britain won the last four matches.

The English team owed their victory to superiority in the men's and ladies' doubles. The eight singles were halved. Great Britain won the men's doubles by 4-0, and the women's doubles by 3-1, losing six of the eight mixed doubles. Individually H. G. N. Cooper came out of the match with the best record. He was unbeaten in any of the five matches in which he took part, and his successes must have been the more pleasing to him after his early dismissal the previous week in the German championship singles. Neither country was at full strength. Germany selecting a team of more highly ranked players than that of Great Britain. Thus three of the competing German ladies are ranked in Germany's first whilst four of their men are all ranked equal-six in their country's lists.

GOOD START.

Cooper and Hare gave Great Britain a good start on the first day in beating opponents ranked equal-sixth in Germany. Cooper dropped a set to Tubben, but playing an all-court game ended many of the rallies with a volley or smash to win a well-deserved victory. Hare won the first set against Kuhlmann without difficulty but had to recover from 2-5 and 5-6 to win the match at 6-1, 8-6. Fr. Aussem repeated her German championship victory over Miss Scriven after another three-set match of hard hitting. In the first set, Miss Scriven was inaccurate, while Fr. Aussem was placing her shots well and took the first nine games. Miss Scriven made a great recovery and took five games in succession to win the set. In the third set the German player won all her service games, and by breaking through Miss Scriven's delivery won the set at 6-4. Miss Lyle extended Fr. Horn, Germany's second best player, to 6-4, 4-6, 1-6.

FOUR SINGLES SHARED.

Great Britain won both men's doubles. Cooper and Hare avenged their defeat by Henkel and Denker in the German championship meeting by beating their rivals 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

and Tuckey and Tinkler only lost three games to Kuhlmann and Lund. Miss Lyle and Miss Dearman won their women's doubles, but Cooper and Miss Dearman were the only English pair to gain a point in the four mixed matches.

The four singles on the second day were shared. Tinkler, who was beaten by Henkel, lost many points through over-eagerness. Henkel, on the other hand, volleyed well and placed his service with great skill. In Tuckey's encounter with Denker there were many long driving duels in the first set, which Tuckey finally won 12-10. He relaxed in the second set, which Denker won with the loss of a single game. In the third set the players' encounter with Denker again won their mixed doubles. Tuckey and Miss Scriven were narrowly beaten by Denker and Fr. Horn at 9-7 in the third set, and Hare and Miss Hardwick only admitted defeat to Lund and Frau Schomburgk after 42 games at 11-9 in the third set.

RACING SEASON RE-OPENS

In front of The Goose will win this race. There are many fancied ponies and I know that Australian Boy, City of Brisbane, Dinky, Glorious Star, Lucy Glitters, Portia, St. John and Vriday are all expected to go close. You will have to follow your hunch here and you will most probably find that the ponies which get off at the start will be the placed animals at the finish.

Maxie Baer Likes Champagne

AND DOESN'T WANT TO FIGHT

Chicago, Sept. 17.

Max Baer, the world's heavy-weight champion, is more interested at the moment in having a good time than in fighting in defence of his title, which he probably will do in June, 1935.

Baer is touring the country, appearing on the stage in various cities. He sings a little, dances a little and talks a lot. When his act is over he goes out where the lights burn brightly at night.

He told friends here of an incident in New York that greatly amused him. He was in a night club. Two drunken men got in a fight. One of them was knocked down and Baer stepped in his place and said to the other:

LIKES CHAMPAGNE BEST.

"Buddy, please don't hit me. I only bought you a drink."

"That had the place in an uproar," Baer continued. "The fellow didn't know who I was and passed three or four blows at me, and finally stumbled out of the door after missing one. You should have heard everyone howl."

Very little talking about fighting comes from Baer. He is interested largely in 16-cylinder automobiles, society people, and says he doesn't drink much.

"I like champagne best. I never get tight (drunk). Sometimes I get to feeling good," he said.

Baer will wind up his tour on the Pacific Coast where he is due to make another picture.—United Press.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

By MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

BOOTS RAEHURN, 18 and pretty, tries not to be jealous of the other members of her crowd at Larchmont, fashionable New York suburb. SYLVIA RIVERB, richest girl in town, delights Boots and fails to ask her to a party at the Yacht Club. Boots accepts a last-minute invitation from MRS. WATZEL-MAN, socially prominent, to a dinner at the club that same night.

Quite innocently, Boots is thrown into an embarrassing situation by HARDY WHITMORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking. He tries to induce Boots to go sailing with him and, when she runs away, goes off in a boat alone and falls overboard. The rescue causes considerable excitement and Sylvia is furious. She maliciously reveals the story to MISS FERNELL, who asks Boots to resign from the Juniors.

Hardy calls to apologise to Boots. He asks her to go places that evening and Boots, hurt and defiant, tells him she'd like to go to "The Barn"—a questionable dance resort.

CHAPTER V

Sylvia flicked the ash from her cigarette. The hand holding it trembled a little. Sylvia wore a huge emerald on her third finger; against the sunburned skin it burned like an evil eye.

"I don't know what you're talking about," she said languidly. Isabel stared at her severely. The crisp red curls on Isabel's small head fairly crackled.

"I think you do," Isabel said sturdily. "Mrs. Fernell saw you that day. She sent for Boots. And now Boots is out," she finished, spreading her small fingers apart in an expressive gesture.

"And so what does that make me?" Sylvia wanted to know, with innocence.

"You know as well as I do," Sylvia Rivers said. Isabel hotly. "That Boots Ræhurn hadn't a thing in the world to do with Hardy's being tight that night. He'd had a lot before he arrived at your table. He had some more there."

"Am I denying that?" Sylvia inquired, squinting through smoke, smiling even so faintly. "No, my dear, your little girl friend's big mistake was in going out on the boat with him—getting herself talked about. I," said Sylvia coldly and aloofly, "had nothing to do with that."

"She didn't go with him and you know it. They went out on the porch."

"And after that," Sylvia finished with a laugh that was like the flick of a whip, "after that she remembered nothing. Oh, I know that for time. I've heard it before."

Isabel sprang to her feet, flushing deeply.

"You're perfectly hateful," Hardy admitted. Boots wouldn't go with him on the boat. He grabbed her and she got away."

"And she didn't turn up at the party again that night," interrupted Sylvia. "I know. I know." She cast up her eyes in assumed innocence.

"If you let Boots suffer for this you and I are through as friends," Isabel said. She knew when she was beaten. There was no use trying to appeal to Sylvia.

"Dear, dear, how melodramatic the child is," murmured Sylvia softly. "Come around some day when the weather isn't so hot and perhaps you'll feel differently." She dropped her air of studied insolence and now spoke almost coaxingly to the other girl. "Snap out of it, Isabel. I haven't a thing to do with this affair."

If Boots has been injured, that's her business. Why, I'd be glad to talk to Mrs. Fernell about it—ask her to give Boots another chance."

"You would? Honestly?" "Yes, only that—only that Boots went to the Barn last night with Hardy, and John Fernell saw her there. It's all finished. Sylvia in a tone of gentle regret, "all over town this morning."

"I don't believe it," Isabel knew what Mrs. Ræhurn thought about the Barn. Not that anything shocking had ever happened there—only, well, the nicest girls in Larchmont didn't go there, usually."

"Well, my dear, ask her yourself." Sylvia's manner was a judicious compound of sympathy and boredom. "Even nowadays," she went on judicially, "a girl has to be fairly careful what she does. Oh, I know, my dear, we all get and smoke and take a drink if the tabbies aren't looking—but the Barn! Well, even I draw the line at that."

Sylvia said with superior sweetness and gentleness. "Nobody knows better than I what a true friend you are. But, believe me, you're wasting your time on Boots. She is evidently determined to be declassée. Some girls are like that. You can't do anything with them." She ground her cigarette out in the huge pewter tray.

"I don't believe it," Isabel said. "We grew up together. Until they lost their money about five years ago Boots was asked to everything. Her family has lived here longer than anyone else."

Sylvia allowed herself to look profoundly bored. "I know," she offered lightly. "But where does all that get us? There's no use kidding yourself. Izzy darling. Boots has chosen a different line. She's probably decided she's got to do something spectacular to get notice nowadays. Not that I think Hardy would ever take her seriously. He's just amusing himself."

"Boots is beautiful enough for any man to take seriously," Isabel said with heat. "My cousin Marion—you know, the artist—said when she was here last year that Boots has true classic beauty. Marion raved about her."

Sylvia contented herself by merely lifting her finely arched brows over her too-prominent, too-closely spaced blue eyes.

"We simply must patch the whole thing up," Isabel insisted.

"Really?" she said, disposing of Boots and cousin Marion all in one breath.

"And I think Hardy is terribly interested in her if you ask me," Isabel flared, annoyed at the other's air. "Why wouldn't he be?"

"Well, that's perfectly sweet of you, dear," murmured Sylvia with the tolerant air of one humoring a lunatic. So Isabel went away, wounded and puzzled and worried. If Boots had gone to the Barn with Hardy, on the heels of being asked to resign from the Juniors, that was the supreme gesture of defiance. All the Juniors knew Mrs. Fernell's attitude on the subject of the Barn. It was all right, of course, for John Fernell, 23 and dissipated, to go there; but the girls under Mrs. Fernell's leadership in the Juniors understood the tact ban on the place.

Boots' attitude, when Isabel saw her, puzzled her further. This was a new Boots, cool, enigmatic, untouchable. It was funny, resigning from the club, wasn't it? She wanted to know. She ought, anyway. She had never liked it. Everybody was so stuffy.

"But next year's dances," Isabel began, appalled. "Why, we simply must patch the whole thing up! It's all so stupid. You want to go to the Thanksgiving dance, don't you?"

Isabel smiled a faraway smile and said she hadn't the faintest idea where she would be by Thanksgiving. Isabel, repulsed by the other girl's coldness and disinterest, refrained from saying anything about Sylvia, the Barn or any of the other topics her mind had been churning about.

If she had known that, on her departure, Boots hung herself down on the living room couch and burst into frantic weeping she would have returned quickly. As it was, they parted with a distant sense of reserve, almost unfriendliness. Boots, conscious of having been in error when she had gone to the Barn with Hardy, wounded in her pride, Isabel, hurt to the quick, stung by her friend's unresponsiveness and withdrawal.

"I don't know what's gotten into me," Boots murmured to a sitting position and mopping her streaming eyes. "I look a perfect fright. What if anyone should come to the door!"

She bathed reddened eyes and straightened her tumbled locks. Could Isabel understand that her costume last night had been a gesture of defiance, directed at her enemies. Why, the Barn had been a horrid bore. Couples revolving slowly in a smoke-laden room. Indifferent food, sandwiches, hardy, bringing and running entirely true to form as the wild young man out for a night's gaiety. Boots had hated all of it and had drawn a long breath of relief when at last she had been set down in her own driveway.

But to-day everything was more to the point. Instead of pouring out the torrent of sympathy and indignant championship she had expected, Isabel had come around with a stiff, worried air to ask if she didn't mind being left out of the autumn parties.

Boots made no answer, but her head was bowed. How different the house looked with Mother away! Nothing seemed to go right. Even the window shades were at crazy angles and no matter how she twisted and turned they wouldn't seem to respond. Oh, she would get out of here, go over to the club and swim and forget her troubles.

She went along swiftly, swinging her bathing bag, humming a tune with an air of casualness she was far from feeling. On the veranda, a magazine in her lap, her eyes on two small figures in the sand, sat young Mrs. Perry George, one of the Ræhurns' neighbours. Boots liked and admired the tall young woman with the fresh colour and the friendly eyes. Frances George had been an editor's assistant before and after her marriage. Her house was a delicious tumble of books and magazines and flowers, rather unlike the usual suburban interior. Boots liked to go there.

"Hello, there," Frances put down the story she had been reading and beckoned to her. "I hear you're housekeeper. Come and have lunch with us to-day. We'd love it."

Boots perched on the arm of the flattered wicker armchair. "I'd adore to. Sure you want me?"

There was something challenging about her tone and Frances George elevated an inquiring eyebrow. "What d'you mean? Of course, we do."

Boots shrugged her pretty shoulders. "The old ladies are after my scalp. I'm no longer a member of the Larchmont Juniors."

"Oh, that!" Frances laughed cheerfully. "Well, I don't see how you stood it as long as you did. You'll be dead long enough."

"You don't understand," Boots went on with a sort of gay defiance. "I was asked to resign."

The young woman in the blue print frock frowned. "What do you suppose I care?" she demanded. "Tell me about it if you want to, but it doesn't matter in the least." She rose from her chair at a shrill cry from one of the small red-suited figures. The boy-child was belabouring the girl-child with a shovel.

"I must rescue Gwen from the Fiend," she said casually, to the utter scandal of two ladies nearby, gossiping over their needlepoint. "See you later. Cheer up, one."

Boots went toward the bathhouse with her head held high. It gave her a lift to have the matter of her disgrace taken so casually. Maybe she wasn't outside the pale completely after all.

But she passed a group of young people at the showers several heads were turned aside casually. Judith Devlin, whom she had known rather well at school, looked straight through—looked beyond her.

"Come along," Judith said to some unseen companion in her clear, pleasant voice. She ignored Boots completely.

The girl went on to her cubicle; her heart beating fast, her blood racing. So it was to be war to the knife, was it? She would show them how much—how little she cared! (To Be Continued.)

HAVEN OF REFUGE.

HUNAN REDS CROSS TO KWEICHOW

Canton, Sept. 20. It is learned in official circles that the Reds, who recently invaded Southern Hunan, have slipped into Kweichow Province, apparently for the purpose of avoiding pressure from the combined Kwangtung and Kwangsi armies.

The Kwangsi military authorities have ordered two divisions of Kwangsi troops, now stationed on the Kwangtung-Hunan border, to move into Kweichow immediately in order to assist the Kweichow Government to suppress the Communists.—Central News Agency.

nine of diamonds discarded from dummy, and West was squeezed.

If West discarded the ten of clubs, then a diamond would be led to dummy's king, a club ruffed and the queen of clubs established for the thirteenth trick. If a diamond was discarded by West, then the Jack of diamonds would be established in the North hand for the thirteenth trick.

While only four odd trumps bid, it was necessary to make the six odd to receive, top score on the card, as five odd was always brmal.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

By W. E. McKenney

There are few planola hands in duplicate contract. A planola is a hand that has no special feature to it, and one with which most pairs will arrive at the same contract and make the same number of tricks. At auction we found many planola hands, as bidding didn't play a very important part. Now, a hand that may be a lay-down for four-odd still may be difficult to bid. They again there are hands that you can see at a glance would be difficult to bid to a slam contract. Still you can see a chance of making the slam.

To-day's hand is a good example. It was played by Mrs. A. C. Hoffmeier, president of the women's auxiliary of the American Bridge League.

When holding a four-card minor and a four-card major, it is best to open the contracting with your four-card minor. Then, on the next round of bidding, show the major. In this manner your partner will know that your major suit is only four cards in length.

The Play

East's opening lead was the four of hearts, which West won with the king. West returned the three of spades, which Mrs. Hoffmeier won in dummy with the ace. A small club was returned from dummy, Mrs. Hoffmeier won with the ace and then led the seven of hearts, ruffing in dummy with the five of spades.

Another club was played and ruffed with the seven of spades. The ten of hearts then was ruffed

HOME POLITICS

BRITISH GROUPS GIRD THEIR LOINS

London, Sept. 19.

The Conservative Party Conference opens at Bristol on October 4, and official agenda, which has now been issued, is of special interest because the Party is numerically the most powerful partner in the existing system of co-operation between political parties supporting the Government.

First place in the agenda is given to a resolution expressing unequivocal confidence in National Government.

A resolution likely to arouse discussion, invites the Party to condemn a certain provision of the draft policy on Indian Reform, upon which the report of the Joint Select Committee of Parliament is still pending. It is, however, recalled by The Times that the Conservative party has recently and decisively refused to do this.

London, Sept. 20.

Domestic political activity is being renewed after the Autumn holidays, and, at the meeting yesterday of the Executive Committee of National Liberal Federation, it was decided that at next General Election, Liberals will contest 400 seats and that there are to be no compacts with other parties.

Fear Ridicule.

London, Sept. 20.

The Executive of the National Liberal Federation, when rejecting an amendment in favour of contesting only safe seats, officially decided to fight in the next election on the widest possible basis with 400 candidates.

It is forecast that many Liberals fear an egregious failure with its consequent ridicule and wonder from whence the money will come as the average cost of contesting a seat is £500.—Our Own Correspondent.

In announcing that the subscription lists would close on October 1, the Viceroy, Lord Willington to-day expressed his grateful thanks for the manner in which the appeal had been received.

In addition to the £445,000 in cash, many gifts of clothing, food and healing material have been received.—Reuter.

The authorities are investigating a charge that members of the crew of the Morro Castle were threatened that they would be placed on the black list if they told the truth about the disaster.

has thus artfully forced the Labour Party to bear the whole cost of printing its propaganda.

The Socialist League virtually invited the Conference to disown the Labour Party Executive, and substitute its famous Five Year Plan, involving a Socialist dictatorship and the nationalisation of banks and all supply services.

Regarding war, the League rejects the League's audience with the Socialist and other Socialist States, and, finally, a general strike.

IMPORTANT EXHIBITIONS TO BE HELD

Canton, Sept. 20.

In order to arouse people's interest in improving the quality of agricultural products, the Municipal Government has decided to hold an agricultural products exhibition on the Double-Tenth Anniversary—October 10. Plans for holding the exhibition were discussed by the Bureau of Social Affairs yesterday.

A fine arts exhibition to be held in the city library by the Education Bureau next month will also be thrown open on October 10. The exhibition will last for seven days.—Central Press.

Farms and Prisons

Canton, Sept. 20.

Among the important resolutions passed by the Provincial Assembly are relief of farming villages and improvement of prisons. The Assembly has asked the Provincial Government to put them into execution.

The programme for relief of farming villages contains two items: (1) Formation of a committee to formulate concrete plans for economic revival in farming villages; and, (2) requesting the Provincial Government to appropriate all the receipts from the foreign rice tax, and the Central Government a certain amount of funds from the Wheat and Cotton Loan, or income from other sources, to invest in agriculture.—Central Press.

Fears entertained for the safety of Frank Westcott, 21, who was reported missing after leaving his home in Cheung Chau at 7.45 a.m. on Wednesday, were allayed yesterday.

It appears that he missed the last ferry to Cheung Chau on Wednesday night, and stayed with some friends at Repulse Bay.

Soviet Taking Place In Politics Held By Czar's Regime

FRIENDSHIP WITH GREAT BRITAIN

FEARS OF GERMANY BRING FRANCE CLOSER

Moscow, Sept. 13.
A new grouping of European powers in which the Soviet Union is taking a position interestingly similar to that occupied by Imperial Russia in 1914 to-day was exciting keen interest in diplomatic circles here.

Bonds of friendship are strengthened among Soviet Russia, France and Great Britain. Again, as in the year preceding 1914, fear of Germany is driving these three nations into each other's arms.

Twenty years ago it was the grey-green troops of Kaiser Wilhelm II and his "Mitteluropa" expansion policy that caused Great Britain, France and Russia to form the Triple Entente. Now it is the brown-shirted forces of Adolf Hitler and his apparent determination to bring Austria under the sign of the Swastika that are having a similar effect.

Several recent events have shown which way the diplomatic winds are blowing.

Until the Nazis captured power in Germany, that nation was Soviet Russia's best friend. Millions of roubles were spent by Russia on German machinery and the technical services of German engineers. Germany was the most popular foreign language in Soviet schools. Relations between the two powers were extremely cordial.

Meanwhile, Soviet leaders regarded France and Great Britain as the arch-plotters for the overthrow of its communist economic system.

CHANGE OF VIEW.

But the Nazi's war on communism changed all that. For eighteen months German-Russian relations have grown constantly cooler. Addressing the All-Union Central Executive Committee last winter, Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff said these relations were "so bad as to be unrecognizable."

The Soviet Union began looking for other friends. Starting with the visit of former Premier Edouard Herriot of France to Moscow last year, Franco-Russian relations have been constantly improving. Recently a group of French scientists visited the Soviet Union and were entertained like potatoes.

M. Litvinoff, who rarely consents to be interviewed, recently granted this privilege to a prominent French journalist. France stands as the Soviet Union's sponsor for membership in the League of Nations. The two countries are now discussing, with every prospect of success, what would amount to a defensive military alliance.

CORDIAL WITH BRITAIN.

Anglo-Russian rapprochement began only recently, but is proceeding apace. The change in tone of the Soviet press since Sir John Simon endorsed M. Litvinoff's pet project, the Eastern European Security Pact, before the House of Commons, is an interesting illustration of the way organs of public opinion are controlled by the Government here.

Before Sir John's speech, the Soviet press could find little to commend in the British Isles or its people. Now, suddenly, the British have become an excellent race, led by wise and discerning statesmen.

Significant also is the recent agreement of Moscow and London to exchange military attaches, something they had never done since the revolution.

Only recently M. Joseph Stalin,

"CHAMPION" MOTHER.

Married at 16, she now has 21 children, more than any other woman in Hungary. HUMAN OSTRICH DISCOVERED

STRANGE DISCOVERY AT INQUEST

It was stated at a Battersea inquest, on William Leslie Fields, prisoner in Wandsworth Gaol, that he died in St. James's Hospital, Balham, after swallowing three horsehair balls.

The deputy medical officer of the prison, Dr. Charles Staney, said that the man was admitted in February 1933, convicted of living on the immoral earnings of women. He was in good general health, but had an operation two years ago.

"He told me that this operation was because he had swallowed pins and needles," said Dr. Staney. "He was put under observation when he arrived in prison, but his mental state was found to be normal. When he complained of stomach pains I asked him if he had swallowed anything. He said he had not, but he thought the pains were due to things he swallowed before going to prison."

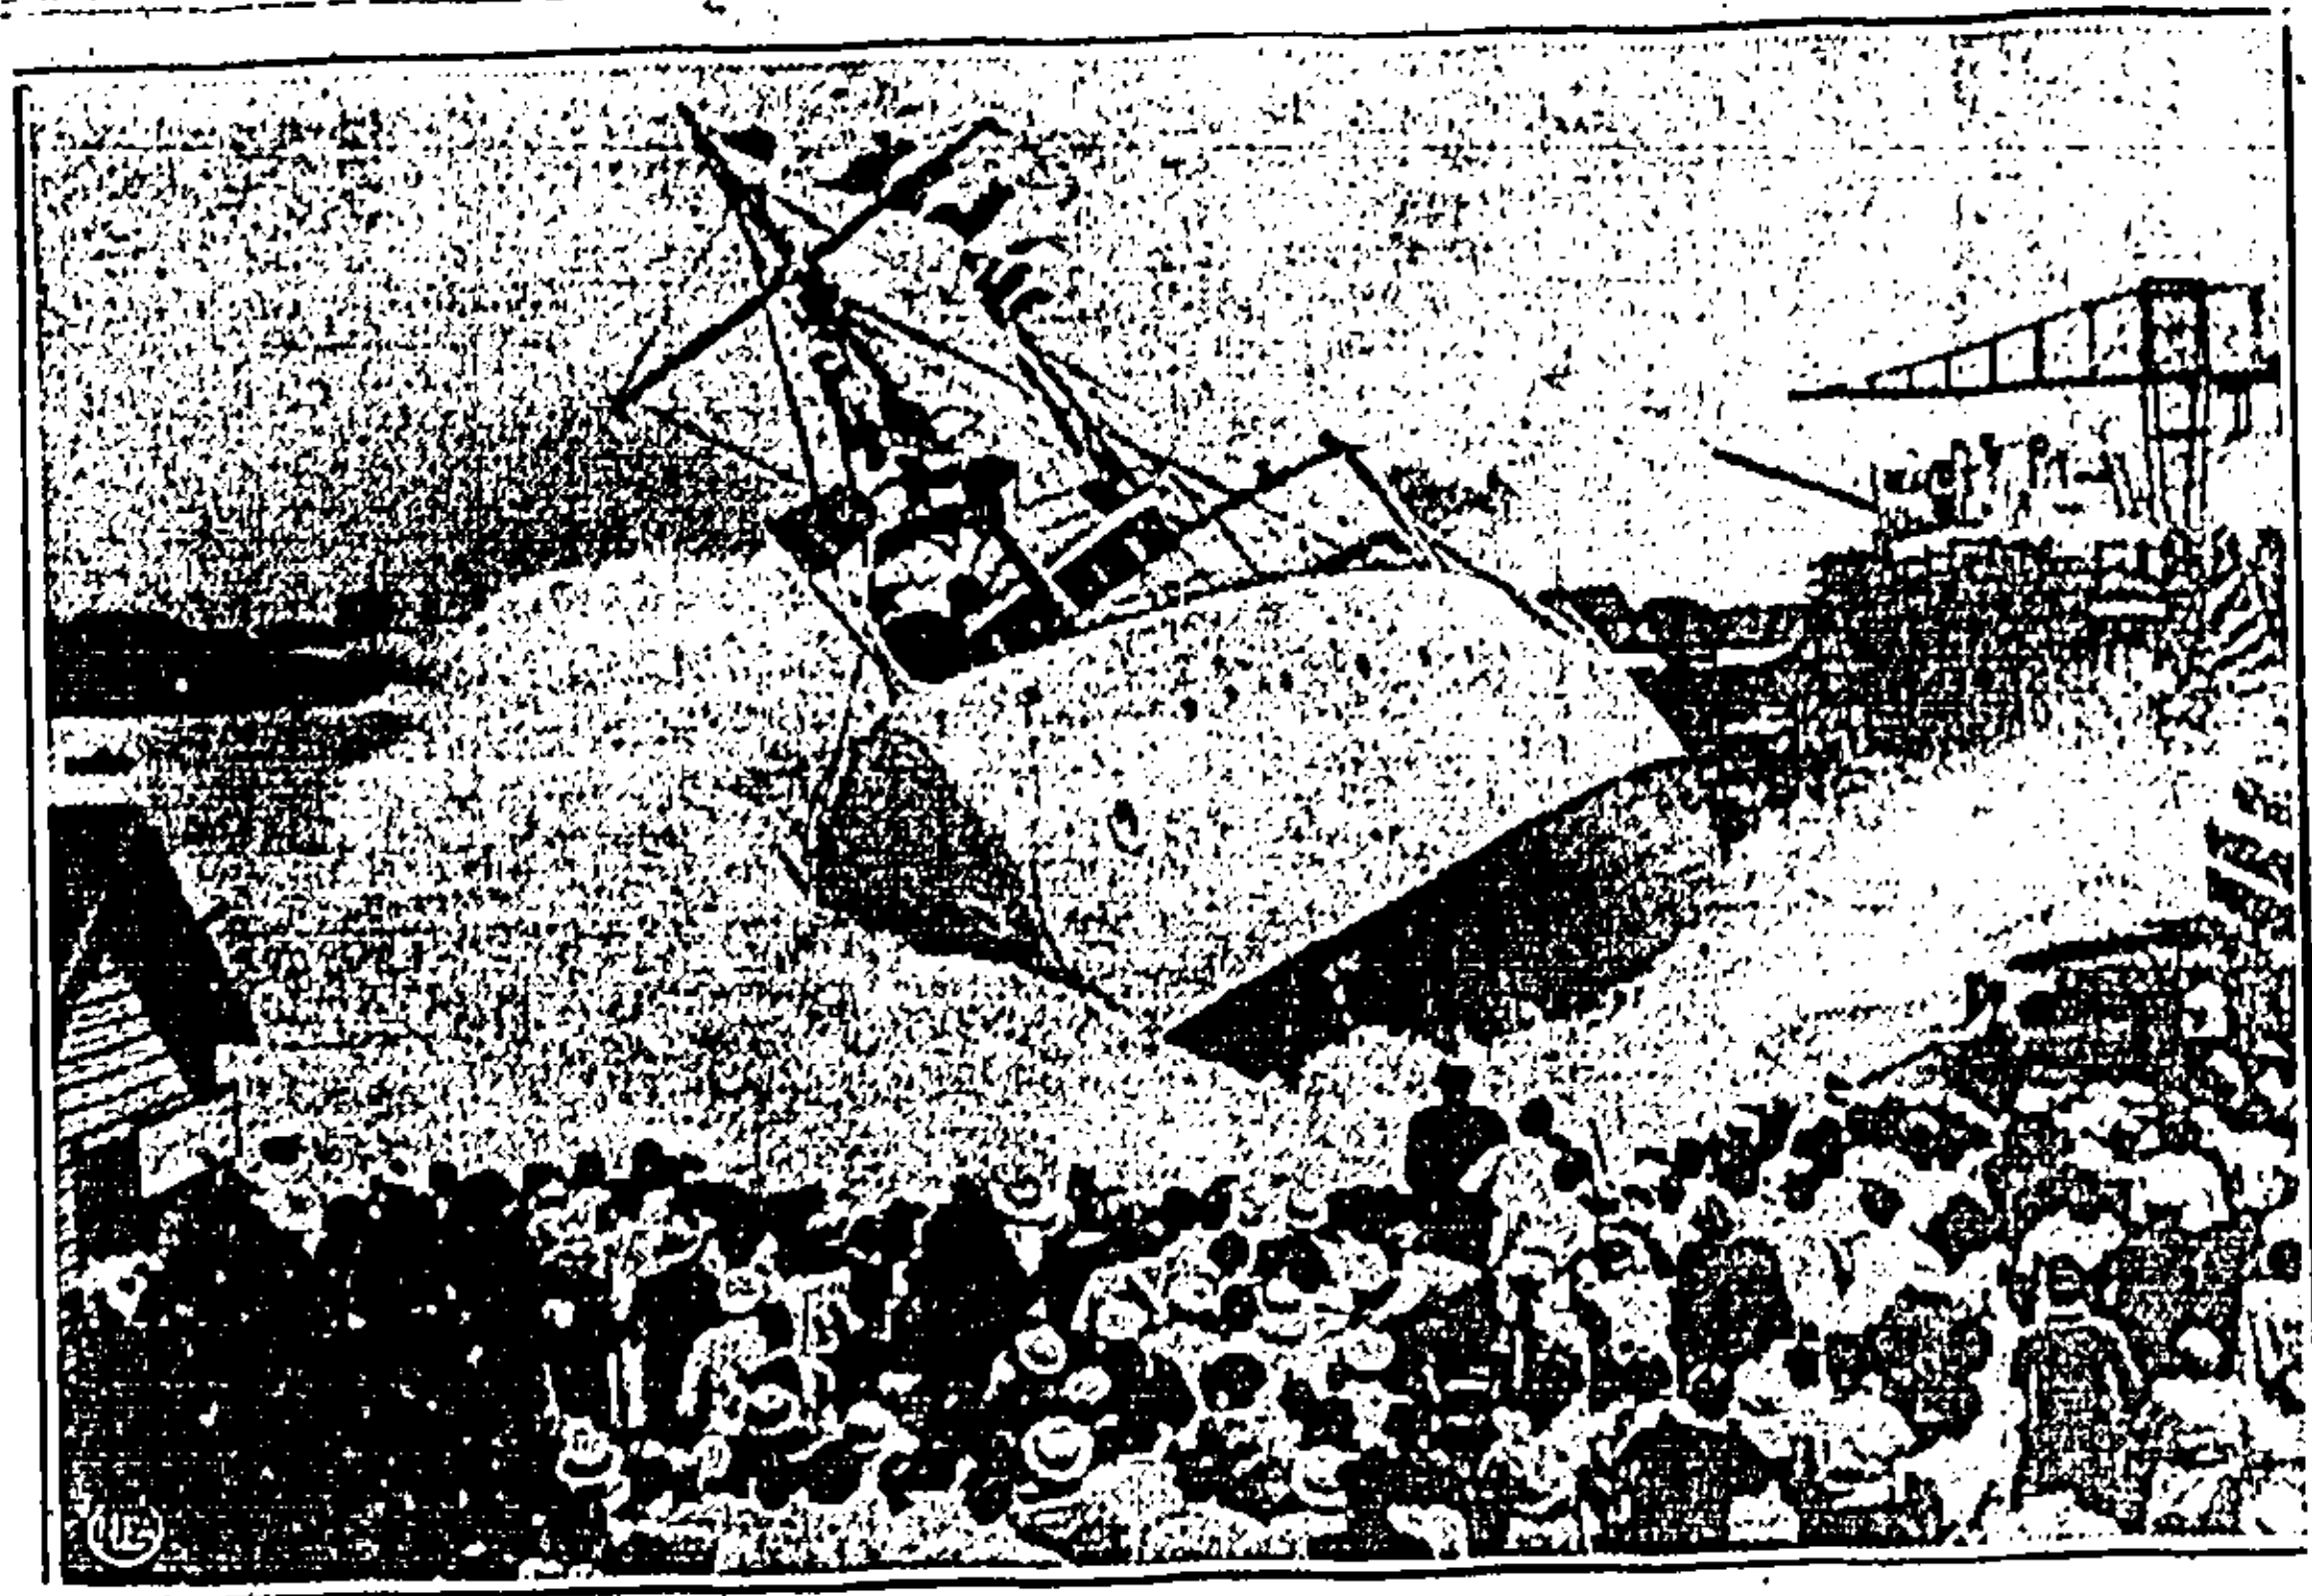

The Deputy Coroner—Had he any access to horsehair material while in prison?

Dr. Staney—No. The only horsehair material is in the officers' beds, and he could not possibly have had access to them.

Dr. McCormac, medical officer at St. James's Hospital, said that the man was very ill when admitted and died the same day. A post mortem examination showed that his death was due to obstruction caused by three small horsehair balls in the abdomen.

The man's mother said that her son left home seven years ago. She had a letter from him last year telling her he was in prison and when she visited him he said he had stolen money.

The Deputy Coroner said:—This is a very puzzling case. There is evidence that the man swallowed needles and safety pins in order to escape work and to be removed to hospital. It is possible that he swallowed a lot of these foreign bodies, including horsehair, but there is no evidence of mental disease. I record a verdict that he died as a result of the obstruction caused by horsehair balls self-administered, and there is no evidence to show the state of his mind.

In a mighty shower of foam and spray, the new U.S. Coast Guard vessel Onondaga slashes sideways into the waters of Saginaw Bay at Bay City, Mich., in this launching ceremony, baptism witnessed by hundreds of spectators. She is a 135 foot craft, of 11,000 tons gross displacement.

LOURDES CURE

Woman's Remarkable Recovery

Cured, it is claimed, of paralysis, dumbness, deafness, and a sore resulting from an operation, Mrs. Madeleine Dodd, aged 47, the French wife of Mr. John Dodd, a native of Edmondville, Durham, has returned to Paris from Lourdes after a stay of five days.

Mrs. Dodd, who lives at Rue des Martyrs, Montmartre, Paris, was operated on for cancer of the breast at the British Hertford Hospital in Paris in April last.

Subsequently, paralysis of the right arm and left leg set in, she became deaf and dumb, and had been bedridden for three months.

A week ago she was transported to Lourdes and on arrival was so exhausted that she had to have injections.

After she had been there three days and had bathed three times in the water, Mrs. Dodd discovered, she states, that she could walk again. She began to talk, she could hear, and doctors found that the sore on the operation scar had closed up.

Her ability to use the right arm again was, Mr. and Mrs. Dodd told Reuters, the most wonderful thing, seeing that the nerves had been cut below the shoulder during the operation for cancer.

"Neighbours could not believe their eyes when I returned from Lourdes unaided," said Mrs. Dodd.

The Committee of Doctors at Lourdes has certified Mrs. Dodd's recovery, describing the case as a remarkable one, says Reuters.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Dodd took place at Brampton, Cumberland. Mr. Dodd is employed at a Paris factory.

extremely dangerous, and might do great harm to the functional organs.

"If it takes 14 years," he said, "to put on a certain amount of weight, you cannot expect to take that weight off in so many days, without doing a lot of harm. It is quite normal for a man or woman to increase a little in weight towards middle-age, and women, particularly, must expect a certain amount of extra flesh, to give those rounded contours which characterise the female form."

"The rage for slimming, in which the ideal of the schoolgirl is aimed at, is nonsense for a mature woman, and is certainly not healthy. A woman should not worry too much about putting on a little weight. It is quite natural, so long as it does not go beyond a certain point.

"If a woman finds that she is putting on weight too rapidly some dietetic means should be taken to stop the deposits, but great care should be exercised in deciding how this should be done."

EXPERT ADVICE ON MEALS

FOR THOSE OF ELDERLY YEARS

While the term "old age" is necessarily an elastic one, and while some "old" people enjoy quite a good appetite and digestion, it is true for the majority that with the advance of years comes a lessening of the powers of eating and utilising food.

Dr. Robert Hutchison, the well-known expert on food and dietetics, writing in the August issue of the British Journal of Physical Medicine, sets out a suitable diet for those who have difficulty in digesting their meals.

He recommends small, dry meals, with drinks between rather than at meal times; soups and sloppy or bulky foods are barred, and crisp toast or "rusks" are urged in the place of bread. The chief meal, it is suggested, should be in the middle of the day.

The scheme of diet set out is as follows:—

At breakfast, a cup of tea or coffee, a lightly-cooked egg or a little white fish. A tencupful of tea or coffee with a little milk or cream, sweetened if desired.

Midday Meal:—Two courses only—fish and meat, fish and a sweet, or meat and a sweet. Fish should be boiled or steamed—not fried. The sweetest permissible are plain milk pudding, baked custard, jam, or stewed fruit. A little mashed potato or boiled rice is allowed, but no vegetable except spinach or cauliflower tops.

Tea—One cupful of weak tea, with milk or cream, sweetened if desired. No solid food.

Evening Meal:—Always a light meal. Boiled white fish and a potato, or toast and butter, or bread and milk, or a lightly-cooked egg.

At Bedtime—A small cup of soup and a finger of toast, or a cup of Benger's Food, Allenbury Diet, &c., or a little whisky and water with a biscuit.

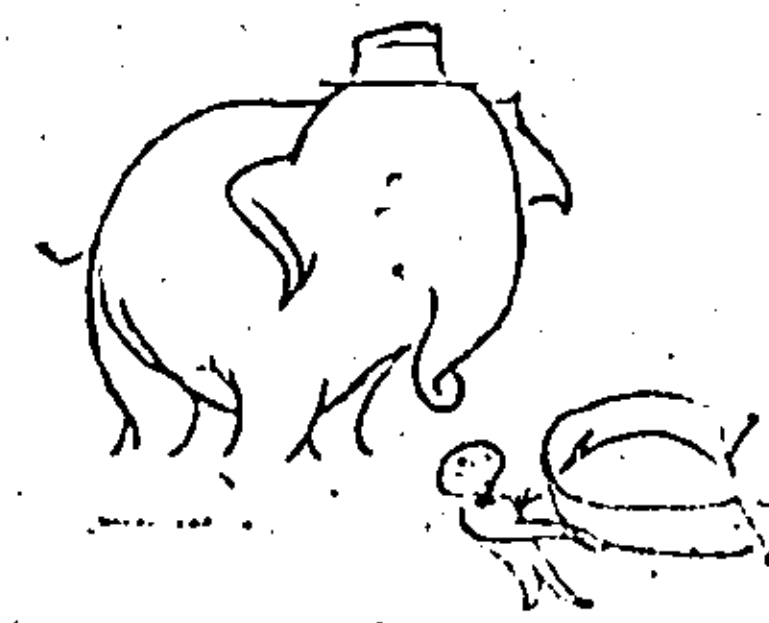

"What he drinks is," says Dr. Hutchison, "to the old man, just as important as what he eats."

A small cup of China tea is recommended as the best drink at breakfast. At lunch and supper he allows a glass of sherry or a table-spoonful of port, or a glass of wine-glassful of hot water slipped slowly at the end of a meal.

ENGLAND AND LOTTERIES

Of the issues of lesser importance which are to come before the Conservative Party Conference next month none is more interesting than the question of a national lottery, facilities for which are to come up for discussion. So far, there has been no indication of the official Conservative attitude on this question, but the mere fact that it is to figure on the agenda is sufficient to show that it is regarded as coming within the sphere of practical politics. The system of State lotteries, so common to Continental countries, has always been frowned upon by certain groups at Home, the argument of those who oppose such a method of raising revenue being that it tends to spread the spirit of gambling and that the State should not have resort to such sources in seeking to implement its income. A point which is conveniently forgotten, however, is that the State at present derives considerable revenue from betting taxes. The mere fact that betting is legal is a tacit admission by the State that people will gamble, and, recognising that point, the Home Government sees no reason why those who indulge in the practice should not contribute to the State by means of the special tax which is levied. Even if betting were illegal, there can be no questioning the point that human nature being what it is, gambling would still persist. There is, actually, a good deal of hypocrisy and cant on this question of lotteries; the Continental attitude is certainly more frank and logical. The continued popularity of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, despite the obstacles which are placed in their way in England, is further proof of the point that the gambling instinct will find a means of expressing itself. The fact may be regretted, but it is a fact none the less. It is probable that the huge amounts raised by the Irish sweeps are factors influencing the Conservatives to toy with the national lottery idea, but, well-based though their viewpoint may be, there can be little doubt that opposition will be voiced by that element which reflects what is popularly known as the Nonconformist Conscience. Another idea which has no more than one occasion been advocated in England is the premium bond plan, in which investors are content

NOTES OF THE DAY

COST OF SECURITY

If the staggering cost of the world's armies and armaments could be tabulated and a positive total of expenditure arrived at, it would probably be discovered that one year's outlay would be sufficient to wipe out the greater part of the international debt of the world, and thus remove one of the greatest obstacles in the way of trade revival. It would almost certainly disclose that the amount required for each day of the year, to pay troops and armaments, battleships, aeroplanes, submarines and tanks, would be sufficient to meet the annual requirements of the League of Nations. It is a remarkable fact, when it is remembered that the League of Nations is the only place of peace machinery in operation continuously, that the nations are so careful of their little contribution to Geneva, and so watchful of its utilization, while they are so open-handed, indeed reckless, in spending the money of the people for arms and munitions. When statesmen suggested some years ago that the League of Nations might very well organise an international police force, with land sea and air units, so that the scrapping of national navies and the disbandment of armies would be possible, there were actually some who cried: "What will it cost?" And before they got an answer, added: "We can't afford it."

COSTLY ECONOMY

It can be argued that the armed forces of the world are necessary for the preservation of peace and that their cost is therefore not unreasonable. But it must be admitted at that same time that if the cause for suspicion between nations were removed, if the causes of fear and hatred and jealousy were eradicated, the necessity of these costly armed legions would be gone and the task of disarmament advanced to fruition. Since the League of Nations is the world's best hope in this task of peace-making, it surely merits the generous financial assistance of the powers. It should be the first, and not the last, duty, of member Governments, to provide the funds for their contribution to Geneva. If their practice economy in that direction, they may find it ultimately a most costly saving. A year's fee to the League would not pay for one day's war.

BALANCING THE BUDGET

Taxpayers in the various countries have the consolation of knowing that no budget in the world is more carefully scrutinised at every turn than that of the League, and that there is little room for waste at Geneva. All the League's activities, spreading to every part of the world, have to be carried out at a total annual cost of about one-seventh the cost of a single battleship. From the fact that the newly published audited accounts show a surplus at the end of 1933 amounting to nearly 1,200,000 gold francs, it may be deduced that those who are responsible for League expenditure have done their job well. As a matter of fact, this result is all the more creditable in view of the unusual difficulties experienced in collection the money due to the League from its states-members. Exchange difficulties, of course, have affected many other organisations and business concerns in addition to the League. Countries with no intention of defaulting have not found it easy to pay their contributions in the gold currency which can be used by the League. It is not surprising, in the circumstances, that some had not completed their 1933 payments by the end of the year. The League auditor, in his report, recognises that this was a "temporary state of affairs". With the improvement in trade and more settled conditions, financial worries may be lightened very speedily. The League, in point of fact, has not had to wait long for a good proportion of the money owing to it. Early in 1934, outstanding amounts began to roll into the Geneva coffers and, of course, current contributions are being paid as well. The League is not yet in danger of bankruptcy, but it cannot afford to lose a penny of the contributions due it. Nor can the world afford not to pay its Geneva bills.

reason of the chance of substantial prizes in the periodical drawings. Something along these lines would no doubt make a wide appeal. If the Old Country were to resort to any of these methods of raising funds, there would undoubtedly be a demand locally that Hongkong should come into line. With indications that the public will subscribe at least $80,000 to the Picnic Bay Sweepstake, Hongkong's predisposition to indulge in a mild "flutter" in the hope of personal gain is established.

BRITAIN'S PROFITS FROM INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL

When the gold standard lapsed in September, 1931, the Bank of England's policy changed from credit restriction to expansion. Industry found itself able to borrow money for industrial development. By March 4, 1932, practically all the credit obtained in America, was repaid. This was six months ahead of schedule. A few months later, the $50,000,000 loan was liquidated. So, too, was the French credit of a like amount. Then came the War Loan conversion scheme, the greatest financial transaction the world has ever known. The immediate result was to curtail still further the spending power of all bondholders, but that transaction paved the way, in a manner only vaguely foreseen, to the speeding up of industry.

While the War Loan was producing five per cent, thousands of business organizations with surplus capital were content to invest in this secured stock rather than attempt industrial expansion for hypothetical reward. The conversion put an end to this tendency. Industry and business were forced to use their own resources to make profitable trade. So the thawing-out of frozen capital was accentuated. Government stock lost its appeal. There was ushered in an era of industrial rejuvenation. The ban on foreign lending helped to speed it up. Money piled up in the banks. The bank rate came down to 2 per cent for the first time in thirty-five years and interest on deposit accounts was reduced to 1/2 per cent.

A building boom started, and here was a natural outlet for capital with an assured security, and this explains the phenomenon so puzzling to visitors who have noted the intense building activity going on all over the country—not a town, village or hamlet being exempt. Between $80,000,000 and $100,000,000 a year has been advanced to finance the building of homes, and the Building Society movement alone has been the medium of providing borrowers with almost £1,000,000,000.

This is only one side of the picture. Greater sums have been expended on the creation of new factories and new plants; units in the nation's economic cog which are creative and in the long run, reproductive. These operations have been the outcome of demand for the modernization of industry. In the process, there has been a remarkable shift in industry from north to south, as well as interchange of location in the Midlands. Great Britain is to-day reaping the benefit.

Many entirely new concerns have started, a large number impelled by the need to get within the tariff walls England has built up. Statistics, issued in London, show that in 1932 there were 255 public and 9,949 private companies registered, making in all a total of 10,204 concerns, with a cumulative nominal capital of £70,000,000. This movement continued to expand in 1933, for the number of public companies registered was 330 and private companies 11,054, giving a total of 11,384, with aggregate nominal capital of £100,000,000. There is ample evidence that statistics for the current year will travel considerably higher, for this business development is integral with Great Britain's recovery.

One of the most amazing changes the years have wrought in national psychology has relation to saving. The need of thrift has got hold of the people. It is taught in every school. Week by week almost every schoolchild buys a 12-cent stamp from the schoolmaster. The stamp is stuck in a book and when the value in stamps reaches the requisite figure a National Savings Certificate is bought, or the money is deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank. Between February, 1916, when the National Savings Movement was started, and May, 1934, 1,185,644,485 National Savings Certificates were sold. They represent a value of £1,000,000,000, and the total sum which the small investors in England hold in national savings is £2,500,000,000. Students of political developments are inclined to forget what a sheet anchor to stability this enormous aggregation of capital, held in the homes of the workers of Great Britain, means.

The Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna fixes the declaration of monetary policy issued immediately after the collapse of the Economic Conference last year as epoch-making. It was signed by representatives of almost every part of the Empire, including the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"This statement," he says, "formally adopted the principle of a managed currency with a view to maintaining a stable price level. It noted that the persistent adherence of the United Kingdom to the policy of cheap and plentiful money had been increasingly effective in raising wholesale commodity prices."

"The declaration may well prove to be the most important profession of faith that the world has yet had on the subject of monetary policy. It accords with an immense advance in public appreciation of the conditions of modern business life. The price level of commodities in daily use is recognized as the measure of stability in the value of money, and the maintenance of such stability is the proper objective of monetary policy."

"The Government's policy of cheap and abundant money, primarily embarked upon for the special object of converting national debts to lower interest rates, has been in force consistently for two years. The success of the policy in maintaining the general average of prices at a level which renders production profitable is to-day beyond question."

"World trade may still be disorganized, the exchanges chaotic, international dealings hampered by prohibitive tariffs, quotas and other restrictions; yet, notwithstanding all these obstacles, often described as insuperable, the trade of Great Britain, by universal acknowledgment, has for some months been making steady and gratifying progress. The abundance of short-term money and the higher prices of securities encourage conversion of debts to lower interest rates, while expanding trade, both directly and indirectly, through its strengthening of confidence, stimulates further capital development."

"Thus the flow of business runs more smoothly through a whole series of channels. New money finds its way into industry. The supply of an adequate quantity of money is now seen to be as certain in restoring trade and employment as the curtailment of the required supply is certain to restrict them. "These are the first fruits of our new-found independence in monetary affairs."

The Very Idea!

THIS WATER POLO
By Eddie Kelly, Swam Songster

TIENTSIN, we notice, won the Interport swimming without participating in the Water Polo.

We don't blame them.

Water polo is only for people who want their bodies recovered after they are drowned. Otherwise they'd simply jump off a Star Ferry in the harbour.

This game has a tremendous vogue in the Y.M.C.A., as many as seven or eight men trying out in an endeavour to make the six-man team.

It is even more popular with the doctors who specialise in eye, ear and nose troubles. They make frequent donations to the sport (and collect larger ones from it).

It is played in a swimming pool or ocean which should be at least seven feet deep at both ends, in order that no one can stand on the bottom and rest when he is about to go under for the third time. It has to be seven feet, because most water poloists average about six feet high and weigh 275 lbs. Men smaller than that go in for football, wrestling and boxing and other mild sports.

The principle of the game is roughly the same as football—to grab the man with the ball and prevent him from carrying it to your goal.

This is done by holding him under water until he lets go of the ball, and tearing his bathing suit off so that he will not dare appear on the surface in the presence of ladies.

The best thing to be said in water polo's favour is that it is not an overemphasized sport, a player having the shortest season of any known type of athlete.

On the average, he lasts a week and a half, and then decides to devote his time towards drinking, and having his lungs rolled.

Another good thing in favour of water polo players is that they don't talk you deaf about their exploits. Anyone who has played in more than two games isn't able to talk at all.

MANY TRAFFIC OFFENDERS

"GROSS DEFIANCE OF THE LAW"

"It is gross carelessness; in fact it is gross defiance of the law," remarked Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, when imposing a fine of $15 on F. Chong, driver of private car No. 721, charged with dangerous driving, by driving over the street refuge opposite the Star Ferry.

Traffic Sergeant Clarke said defendant's car was outside the Star Ferry facing east, and he drove over the street refuge.

Mr. Hamilton: What do you mean by driving over it? Don't you know it is for people to take refuge on?

Defendant made no reply, but admitted the summons.

FAILED TO REPORT.

V. Olinfsky, driver of private car No. 2771, was cautioned for having failed to report a collision with a wall on the Repulse Bay Road.

Traffic Inspector Alexander said the front tyre of the car burst, and the car crashed into the wall.

DID NOT MAKE WAY.

Kum Ho, driver of public car No. 675, was fined $10 for not allowing other traffic to pass when driving slowly on the Shek-O Road.

Inspector Alexander said Mr. L. G. Scott was driving his car along Shek-O Road in the direction of Island Road immediately behind defendant's car, which was travelling at a speed of 11 miles an hour, according to defendant. Mr. Scott sounded his horn, as he wanted to overtake and pass, but defendant kept his car to the middle of the road, and it was not till just below Windy Gap that Mr. Scott was able to get past.

Mr. Scott said that every time he sounded his horn, defendant drew right over to the right hand side of the road.

DANGEROUS DRIVING.

Ng Yuk, driver of motor bus No. 304, was fined $10 on a summons of dangerous driving.

Sub-Inspector Saunders said defendant stopped his bus on a steep corner at the top of Dairy Farm Hill, and witness had to swerve sharply to avoid a collision. Cheung Ying, driver of motor No. 2389, was fined $10 for driving at a speed of 22 miles an hour in Pokfulam Road.

Woo Hing-cheung, driver of motor cycle No. 4083, was fined $10 each on two summons of driving without a licence, and failing to have full control of his machine.

Inspector Alexander said defendant had two pillion riders. One was seated half on the pillion and half on the seat, while the other was seated on the pillion, and defendant himself was seated half on the seat and half on the tank.

SIGNAL IGNORED.

Trinh Xuan Due, owner driver of an Austin 7, was summoned for disobeying the policeman's directions and failing to stop, at the junction of Wyndham Street and Hollywood Road on the afternoon of September 6.

Defendant had come down from Arbuthnot Road, intending to carry on into Hollywood Road. Evidence was given that a collision was narrowly averted with a car coming down the slope from the Central Police Station.

In taking a lenient view and administering only a caution, Mr. Hamilton said he had in view the fact that the witness in the other car, Mr. W. M. Thomson, was an officer of the Court.

VAGRANT GERMAN

SENT TO HOUSE OF DETENTION

Walter Franz Heinrich Kohler, 29 years, a German, appeared before Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a charge of being a vagrant in the Colony. Defendant is an engineer by profession.

Detective Sergeant Mottram said defendant gave himself up at the Kowloon City Police Station yesterday morning. The German Consul had offered him the passage to Shanghai, but defendant did not want to accept it, because he apparently had no friends there. Defendant wanted to go to Tientsin, but the German Consul could not send him there at the present moment. The only thing to do was to send him to the House of Detention until arrangements could be made. Defendant was in the Colony some weeks ago, and the German Consul had to give him assistance in settling his hotel bill. He then went to Canton.

Mr. Hamilton remanded defendant to the House of Detention, pending arrangements for his removal for him to be sent away.

ENDEAVOUR DEFEATED IN SENSATIONAL CUP RACE

EXCITING FINISH BY RAINBOW

CHALLENGER CAUGHT AFTER FINE START

RUNNING AWAY TO A BRILLIANT LEAD AT THE BEGINNING OF THE RACE, THE BRITISH YACHT ENDEAVOUR, CHALLENGER FOR THE AMERICA'S CUP, WAS OVERTAKEN TEN MILES FROM THE FINISH BY THE VANDERBILT CRAFT, RAINBOW, AND BEATEN BY THREE MINUTES IN THE THIRD CONTEST OF THE SERIES.

It was no mistake in seamanship on the part of the British skipper, Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith. He missed the wind at a critical moment and the defender kept the breeze. Then, because of her inability to sail close to the course, the Endeavour lost valuable time and distance by short tacks on the run home.

It was announced after the race that there would be no contest to-day, Mr. Sopwith having asked for postponement to effect repairs to the winches which set the big Genoa jib.

NO CONTEST TO-DAY

Newport, Sept. 20.

Conditions appeared to favour the Rainbow to-day in the third race for the America's Cup, yet it was the Endeavour, which, thanks to the perfect helmsmanship of Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith, went ahead at the start. Holding most of the breeze, the Endeavour drew out into a lead of 100 yards which she increased to 200 yards and turned the mark six minutes before the Rainbow.

Observers at this point expressed the opinion that if the Endeavour continued to race so splendidly it would be a rout. At 1.42 p.m., the Endeavour was heading straight for the mark and continued to draw away from the Rainbow, whose plight was extraordinary since the weather to-day was what the Vanderbilts had been praying for.

MUCH THE FASTER BOAT.

It was obvious that the Endeavour was the faster boat even in an off wind and regardless of the weather conditions.

At twenty minutes to three the Endeavour went about on a port tack with the Rainbow gaining considerably. Four minutes later the Endeavour returned to the starboard tack on the Rainbow's weather and was losing considerable ground.

At 2.46 p.m., the boats were level, with the Endeavour to windward and the Rainbow going through her lee. Including the elapsed time, it took the Endeavour 2 hours 20 minutes 22 seconds to reach the mark, as compared with the Rainbow's 2 hours 26 minutes 62 seconds. The Endeavour's time was excellent considering the wind, but she had some time to her.

FATAL TACKLING.

The Endeavour gybed round the mark and sheeted the mainsail close. It seemed doubtful whether she would be able quite to fetch home without tacking, owing to the foul tide. There was also some doubt expressed as to whether the Endeavour could finish in time unless the breeze freshened. At twenty-two minutes past two the Endeavour was on a bowle ahead with the wind at east blowing at six miles an hour. Both boats were close hauled.

The Endeavour lost the lead tacking and sailed over to cover the Rainbow, unluckily running into light air while the defender retained the wind and kept to her course. At 3 o'clock the Rainbow was slightly ahead with the Endeavour on port tack.

At 3.11 p.m. the Rainbow was fighting against time, as she must cross the line by 5.10 with still many miles to go. She had proved that with air like to-day she sails closer to the wind.

RAINBOW LIKE EXPRESS.

The yachts were three and a half miles from the finish at ten minutes to four and it was expected they would fetch the finishing line without tacking again. By this time the Endeavour had very little chance of winning, while the Rainbow appeared to be like an express boat and was then three-eighths of a mile ahead.

The Rainbow crossed the line at 4.13 p.m. and the Endeavour three and a half minutes later. The official clock times show that the Endeavour reached the first mark at 38 seconds after 2 o'clock and the Rainbow at 2.7.17.

The Rainbow passed the finishing line at 4.15.34 seconds and the Endeavour at 4.19.

Since the boats started at 11.40 a.m., 20 minutes has to be added for elapsed time. The Endeavour crept up doggedly near the finish, but was unable to get to the line in time. She was foiled by lack of air and the foul tide.

WHY ENDEAVOUR LOST.

The defeat, emphasises Reuter, was not due to a tactical error on the part of Mr. Sopwith. He did all he could. The secret was the Rainbow fetched the finishing line with one long tack from the mark, while the Endeavour sagged to leeward badly after rounding the mark.

She took three short tacks half way down the windward leg. The boat lost in time and distance owing to tacking and the inability to sail close to the course and to windward, as the Rainbow was under her Genoa jib, which, according to the experts, allows the boat a point higher than the Endeavour's Genoa. This was the cause of the defeat.

KOWLOON TRAFFIC SUMMONSES

"Deliberate Swindle" Alleged

"That's a deliberate 'swindle'," said Mr. E. L. Wynne-Jones, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, when M. N. Gutierrez was summoned for driving an unlicensed car on Castle Peak Road, on September 3.

Defendant stated that he wanted to sell the car, and that he used a trade number plate which had been borrowed. He was fined $25.

G. M. Gutierrez, the father of accused, was also summoned for allowing the unlicensed car to be driven. He said he was not home at the time and that he had not given permission for the car to be taken out. He wished to sell the car, and had left it in Paul Bragg's garage.

FOUR CHARGES.

Summoned on four offences of driving a motor cycle on September 23, at 10.25 p.m., without a lamp, no front number plate, no brakes and failing to report a change of address, J. B. Gardiner, of Harbour View Hotel, pleaded guilty to the first three charges and was fined $5, $5 and $5 respectively and was discharged on the last. He stated that the motor cycle did not belong to him and he had not bought it.

The owner of the motor cycle, C. Sloan, was summoned for failing to report a change of owner-ship, but when he stated that the motor cycle had not been sold and still belonged to him, the charge was withdrawn.

R. Kirkwood was summoned for not carrying two front lamps on his motor car No. 3614, on September 4, at 12.40 p.m., and was fined $3.

WRONG SIDE?

Maurice Swain pleaded not guilty, when he appeared in answer to a summons for rounding a bend on Tai Po Road, on the wrong side of the road.

Traffic Sergeant Bradwell stated that on August 22, he was proceeding to Shatin on the Tai Po Road, and at the first bend after the 3 1/2 mile stone, he had to pull up suddenly to avoid running into private car No. 4206, which was coming from the direction of Shatin. The bend was a left-hand bend, and defendant in turning went on to the wrong side of the road. He signalled him to stop, but defendant turned round and stopped him, he replied that he did not see the signal.

Defendant denied that he told the complainant that there was a squeaky noise in the car which he was looking for, and was not paying much attention to his driving, but he admitted that he was listening for the noise. He further stated that the bend was a right-hand bend and that he could not keep too near the wall for fear of pedestrians round the other side.

The case was adjourned until this afternoon to allow the Magistrate, Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones, to visit the spot.

RACING SEASON RE-OPENS: SATURDAY'S OUTLOOK

ALL EYES ON PICNIC BAY STAKES

WARNING TO PUNTERS: SOME UPSETS EXPECTED

FEW OF THE LIKELY WINNERS

(By "Captain Foster")

The majority of us will be wending our way eastward to the Race Course at Happy Valley to-morrow afternoon and, given fine weather, which I very much doubt we shall have judging by the present outlook (Wednesday afternoon), a very large crowd will muster to see a very good afternoon's programme of nine races. There will also be the added attraction of the big sweep, which will be drawn for in the Picnic Bay Stakes, the seventh race on the card. The lucky drawer of the winning ticket will be receiving a very tidy sum in Hongkong Silver! They may say that money is tight in the Colony, but I shall not be surprised to see well over 90,000 tickets, if not the entire 100,000, tickets sold before 3 p.m. on Saturday next!

With regard to the racing, I am prepared to see a few upsets, and would therefore counsel caution to the habitués of the Park. We have had a break of three and a half months, and, after the rest, quite a number of ponies are not sufficiently forward in condition to give their best running.

Take Electric Star for instance: she is undoubtedly the outstanding pony of the meeting, and the only "A" class runner competing. On form she should be a very strong favorite in the Big Wave Bay Handicap, the opposition not being in her class, but as she strikes me as being on the heavy side, I shall not be surprised to see her "go under" solely through lack of condition. If the course is heavy, I think she need fear nothing but on firm going I can see considerable danger coming from Ribble, a vastly improved pony and in fine fettle.

BIG WAVE BAY HANDICAP.

I have already given you my views of Electric Star. On a good course I am inclined to pick Ribble as the winner as I do not think Electric Star can give him 18 lbs. at the moment. On a soft course the Kong mare should have an easy passage and win, as she is good in mud while I have an idea that Ribble does not relish the going if the ground is soft and heavy. High Speed is going nicely and might very easily fill the third position. I think it will be a toss up between him and Soldier of Germany. Spinaway may come in to the picture if the course is heavy, but I fear not otherwise. The sixth starter will be Macaroni but I do not fancy him for the race.

CORROBOROE HANDICAP.

I gather seven Australians will face the barrier for this event, and a very thrilling race should result. To a good start, I think we need not look beyond Atlas for the winner. He is exceptionally fast over a short distance and, if anything, I feel he has been somewhat leniently weighted with 162 lbs. I am a little fogged over Able Amazon and Bobnik Star as I understand the stable jockey will be riding Bobnik Star. Able Amazon looked well and finished strongly last Wednesday morning and if she does not actually win she must be amongst the placed ponies. This is more than I can say in regard to Bobnik Star, but I may be proved wrong. Nell Gwyn is my fancy for the third position.

JUNK BAY HANDICAP.

This is a race confined to Novices, and there will be at least ten ponies competing. Although he has never run into a place in nine starts during the first half of the season, Racing Flick impresses me very much, and strikes me as a vastly improved pony. He is a shapely looking animal and fills the eye and, if his racing capabilities are as good as his looks, I think he will make light work of his burden of 168 lbs and win. I gather he has pleased his connections who are optimistic with his chances. My old decoder Racing Triumph is in the race but I am definitely through with him. Win or lose he shall have no support from me. Our old friend Boxing Eve is to be reckoned with and, provided he gets good start, I think he will be one of the hunters at the finish. Heller, Skelton, King's Parade, No Fear, and Warrington (all winners this season) should not be neglected.

These ponies have been doing useful work and will strip in good condition. I make the race very open.

SUB GRIFFINS AUTUMN PLATE.

This will be our longest race of the afternoon and should also provide a good finish. Copper Idol is my choice as I think he is in better racing condition than Cavalcade. Classic Hall has come on a great deal during the past fortnight and may spring a surprise by winning, and The Bodega should not be neglected. St. Ives plunges in his morning gallops but so far he has never reproduced his training performances on race days when the Colours are up. If in a galloping mood to-morrow afternoon, he is capable of being in the picture at the finish. Surprise is a good pony but went wrong towards the end of last season. He is reputed to be sound again and in good hard condition. Were I to look for an "outsider" I would pick him.

ISLAND HANDICAP.

Another interesting and open race should result in this event. Beta is reported to be a "rod in pickle" here. Frankly, I have not seen him at work but if he is good fettle he must be dangerous. His last outing was in the Smugglers Handicap (six furlongs) which he won in the very good time of 1-29 4/5 by beating Ribble, a head. This performance should make him respected to-morrow afternoon. Budge also has high credentials and cannot be overlooked. Then we have Lemberg, The Tiger and Valorous who require watching. Personally I am inclined to support Valorous who appears to be very well at the moment. The question is how good are the new griffins, Beta, Budge and Lemberg in comparison? Budge I like immensely and feel sure that he will run a good race.

TWEED ISLAND BAY HANDICAP.

As far as I can see a select field of eight ponies will contest this race. Frankly, I am not impressed with the way Soldier of China is moving and for this reason I will eliminate his chances here. I expect, however, to see an interesting race between Brechin, Bright View and Gladiator and will plump on them as being the placed ponies. I am very partial to Gladiator and will make him my choice but I do so with very little confidence, knowing how exceptionally well Brechin is moving these days.

PICNIC BAY STAKES HANDICAP.

Now we come to the pièce de résistance of the afternoon. Excitement will be high, not so much on account of the race itself but on account of the draw for the big sweep which is run on the race. For myself I shall be extremely satisfied if one of my numbers should draw Colombo, Hey Tor or Vago as I think these three ponies will be fighting it out at the finish. I prefer Vago's chances the best of all.

ALDRICH HANDICAP.

Wayward Stag strikes me as being the pony to follow for this race and Glad Eyes should also be supported. An upset is quite likely to occur and, on a good hard course, I do not think William Oaler should be neglected and, on a soft course,

VAUCLOSE HANDICAP.

I feel that the pony that finishes (Continued on Page 9.)

They Say—

THAT Prima Donna may not start to-morrow.
THAT Bronze Era—on account of leg trouble—will definitely not compete to-morrow.
THAT Electric Star is considered a n almost certainty in the Big Wave Bay Handicap.
THAT Valorous has a very good chance of annexing the Island Bay Handicap.
THAT The Tiger will be right on his heels and most probably beat him at the finish.
THAT Atlas will be ridden by Mr. Deltz.
THAT he will most probably canter away with the Corroboroe Handicap.

FINE NEW SUBS

MANY PONIES OF REAL PROMISE

BEST SUPPLIED IN YEARS

(By "Captain Foster")

The subscription griffins for next year arrived last Sunday morning, and I was agreeably surprised at the good condition in which I found them.

A sea voyage usually takes a lot out of the animals, and I was therefore quite prepared to see a very sorry sight when I inspected them that evening at the Stables, more especially as the ponies were confined to a hold of a steamer for eleven days which was the time taken from Dalny to Hongkong. The stamina of a China pony is proverbial and he appears to regain his condition after a couple of days rest combined with good feeding. The contrast between him and an Australian pony is amazing. The latter appears more delicate in constitution and requires infinitely more time to recover his strength after a voyage.

GOOD LOOKING SUBS.

I was most pleased with the appearances of the new subs, and I think I can safely say that the Dealer has supplied us with an exceedingly fine lot of ponies. I do not recollect ever having seen a nicer batch and I cannot help thinking that we shall see some fine gallopers amongst them.

Although there was no pony of the calibre of Racing Boy, I feel that the subs of 1935 were the best supplied in recent years; they were a very level lot, with no outstanding pony, and produced very keen Valours. It is to be hoped that our new lot will prove a level conignment. The ponies will be seen in action at about noon on Monday next (24th) and will be drawn for that evening at the Paddock Race Course. I have taken a very special fancy to Nos. 62 and 106, and hope it will be my good fortune to draw either one of them.

Experts' Hot Tip For 1935 Derby

BOBSLEIGH'S PROMISE

London, Sept. 13. Bobsleigh is the present hot tip for next year's Derby. Experts decided in the country at the present time. Bookmakers are cautiously offering odds of 10/1 against him for the great classic. Bobsleigh ran green at the Ascot meet, his first appearance, but at Goodwood at the end of July, he won the Richmond Stakes in smashing style. He was a 1/3 favourite at the off, and romped home by four lengths.

OWNED BY LORD DERBY.

The colt is the property of Lord Derby, who is lucky to have such a good animal to step into the racing shoes of his Derby winner Hyperion, now retired. Bobsleigh possesses much more range and scope than Hyperion did at the same age. There is nothing flash about this chestnut colt, but when you come to look him over carefully you find it exceedingly difficult to pick a hole in him. Maternally, he is superbly bred. His dam, Toboggan, was herself a brilliant racing mare, winning the Oaks and the Coronation Stakes. The mare is by Hurry On out of Glacier by St. Simon from Glasnik by Isinglass, a good staying pedigree.—United Press.

There are only two mares in the consignment.

POLICE SEIZE RACE HORSE

BELIEVED RECORD BREAKER

Nice, August 21.

Suspected of being the mysterious racehorse which surprised French Turf circles by winning the Prix du Palais Bourbon in record time, with a profit of 24,000 to someone "in the know," a horse was seized by the police here today.

The mysterious coup was effected on the English race-course on Saturday. An unknown animal named Hallencourt won the Prix du Palais Bourbon, a race reserved for horses which have not won £150 in prize money, in a canter at 32 to 1.

Seeing something wrong, the stewards decided to investigate, but the winner had vanished. It was stated that it had been taken out of the exit gate into a van, instead of into the paddock to be unsaddled.

An official inquiry was opened, it being strongly suspected that the missing winner was a horse from the Riviera which had already won several good races.

At Antibes the police thought they had found the mysterious horse, but just as they were about to take it into safe custody it disappeared once again. They followed the trail to Nice, and this afternoon seized a horse which they believe to be the missing Hallencourt.

FRIENDLY HOCKEY

Young Sikhs Defeat Y.M.C.A.

The newly formed Young Sikhs Association was successful in its first friendly hockey match yesterday, when its hockey team met and defeated the Y. M. C. A. second eleven by one goal to nil at King's Park. The game was keenly contested throughout and the issue was in doubt until nearly the end of the game when Gurbaachan Singh, the Interport and Radio Sports Club star forward, found the net to give the Sikhs victory. In the last five minutes, W. J. Brown equalised for the Y.M.C.A., but the whistle blew for "sticks" against a Sikh defender. The referee awarded a corner from which the "Y" failed to score.

The Young Sikhs showed promising team work. W. J. Brown, at forward and E. F. Selt, at centre-half, played well for the losers.

KING UNLUCKY NOT TO BEAT CORBETT

CHAMPION EXTENDED BY A WHIRLWIND HITTER

DECISION MADE DIFFICULT: DEFENSIVE CHAMPION

London, Aug. 21.

It is not often that a championship fight ends in a verdict of a draw. But Mr. Charlie Thomas, the referee at Clapton Stadium, last night failed to decide between Dick Corbett, of London, and Johnny King, of Manchester, who were fighting for the British and British Empire Bantam-weight Championships, help by the former.

Although I was rather inclined to think that King had won—chiefly for his enterprise throughout the 15 rounds—I can understand the referee's difficulty. It was a moderate fight and perhaps on the whole a draw suited the occasion. Corbett, of course, not having been beaten, retains his title.

I have certainly seen better and more interesting fights for a championship than this one. No doubt it suffered from the fact that perhaps having their fourth championship meeting they knew too much about each other.

KNEW THE REPLIES.

They knew the moves and the replies to them like two well-matched chess players.

Corbett is the more scientific performer and with the moral advantage of being the champion was expected to play a predominant part, but for at least two-thirds of the bout he was strikingly apathetic and unenterprising. Although he is an extremely clever exponent of the straight left, King brought so much fire and dash into his own methods that the champion was more concerned in defence.

The best work accomplished by King, who was the more aggressive, was done by his right hand, which he brought down on Corbett's face and jaw over a score of times during the fight. Even towards the end, when Corbett must have felt that his throne was trembling, he showed no striking desire to assert himself and in the last round he was unable to reply effectively to the determined bustle of his rival.

DISAPPOINTING.

It was an extremely disappointing display indeed, for the London crowds naturally expected Corbett to be at an advantage on his own ground after having beaten King twice out of three fights at Manchester.

When I saw Corbett training the other day at Windsor he appeared almost at concert pitch and full of pep, but he seemed indifferent last night.

It was now and then, when King stung him with his right-handers, that he displayed anything like the form a champion should.

King is not a very tactical fighter—most of his stuff is plain and above board—and his skill is more in the direction of hard, honest-to-goodness scrapping.

HEAD FIRST INTO ROPES.

He was a hard trier all through. Sometimes Corbett by clever ducking and evasion put him at a disadvantage, and on one occasion he went head first through the ropes after a tricky side-step by the champion.

He landed good punches to the body, too, and I noticed that at the beginning of every round came out hustling and bustling from his corner.

Where so much in other respects was evenly balanced this showed good ringcraft. Because of this and his more persistent attack I fancy King won. Certainly he put up excellent claims for yet another tilt for that crown of Corbett's. I gave five rounds to King, four to Corbett, six rounds even.

After a two hours meeting at Lord's to-day between representatives of the Australian Test cricket team and the M.C.C., Mr. Aird, assistant secretary of the M.C.C., issued the following:—

"A meeting was held at Lord's to-day between the sub-committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club and Messrs. H. Bushby and Bull, representing the Australian cricket team. Opportunity was taken at this meeting of discussing cricket matters generally prior to the departure from England of the Australian representatives."

Exciting End To Cowes Week

NUMBER OF BOATS OVERTURNED

Cowes Week came to a dramatic end when a series of misfortunes in a heavy gale and torrential rain were added to the familiar racing thrills of the regatta.

The gale grew worse during the day, and the race for the big yachts was cancelled.

Veronica, owned by Sir William Burton, who was at the helm, had been racing for about five minutes when a squall struck her and smashed the main boom. She managed to turn about and return under a small head sail.

Shortly afterwards, Major Harold Hall's Humaine was dismasted and towed in by Lord Forester's motor-yacht Marmara.

The motor-yacht put back immediately to assist an 8-metre yacht, Saska, owned by Messrs. Kenneth Preston and Robert Steele, which had also lost her mast. She struggled in unaided, however, as sufficient of the mast remained to hoist a few yards of sail.

FILLED WITH WATER.

Mrs. A. Vines, with two young women as crew, was preparing a 14ft. sailing dinghy for the Cowes Regatta race when the craft was struck by a fierce gust of wind.

The dinghy heeled over and filled with water, but her air tanks kept her afloat with the three clinging on desperately.

She was swept away by a fast ebbing tide, and four motor-boats set off in a race for life.

As she drifted into angry seas off Egypt Point, there seemed to be little hope for the dinghy, but the motor-launch Sars, which was acting as tender to the committee boat, arrived just in time.

Later, four international 14ft. sailing dinghies capsized in rapid succession. They included Mr. Stewart Morris's R.I.P., which was returned from the international contests at Toronto, and another craft owned by Mr. Christopher Batsey, son of the noted Cowes sail-maker.

The crews were picked up by motorboats.

During the afternoon the order was given for the yachts to take down their strings of flags. It was an order which has rarely, if ever, been given at the regatta.

And it was an order which brought to an end Cowes Week, 1934.

ANOTHER TENNIS WIN FOR BRITAIN

GERMANY BEATEN IN CLOSE INTERNATIONAL TIE

ENGLISH PLAYERS' SUPERIORITY IN DOUBLES DECIDES

Great Britain beat Germany by 13 matches to 11 in the two-day international match at Hanover last month. The match was closely contested throughout. At the end of the first day the countries were level at 6-all, and during the second afternoon the score was level at 9-all. Germany took the lead at 11-9, but were robbed of victory when Great Britain won the last four matches.

The English team owed their victory to superiority in the men's and ladies' doubles. The eight singles were halved, Great Britain won the men's doubles by 4-0, and the women's doubles by 3-1, losing six of the eight matches. Individually H. G. N. mixed doubles came out of the match with the best record. He was unbeaten in any of the five matches in which he took part, and his successes must have been the more pleasing to him after his early dismissal from the previous year in the German championship singles. Neither country was at full strength, Germany selecting a team of more highly ranked players than that of Great Britain. Thus three of the continental German ladies were ranked in Germany's first whilst four of their men are all ranked equal-six in their country's list.

GOOD START.

Cooper and Hare gave Great Britain a good start on the first day in beating opponents ranked equal-sixth in Germany. Cooper dropped a set to Tubben, but playing an all-court game ended many of the rallies with a volley or smash to win a well-deserved victory. Hare won the first set against Kuhlmann without difficulty but had to recover from 2-5 and 5-6 to win the match at 6-1, 8-6. Frl. Aussem repeated her German championship victory over Miss Scriven after another three-set match of hard hitting. In the first set, Miss Scriven was inaccurate, while Frl. Aussem was placing her shots well and took the first nine games. Miss Scriven made a great recovery and took five games in succession to win the set. In the third set the German player won all her service games, and by breaking through Miss Scriven's delivery won the set at 6-4. Miss Lyle extended Frl. Horn, Germany's second best player, to 6-4, 4-6, 1-6.

FOUR SINGLES SHARED.

Great Britain won both men's doubles. Cooper and Hare avenged their defeat by Henkel and Denker in the German championship meeting by beating their rivals 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

Maxie Baer Likes Champagne

AND DOESN'T WANT TO FIGHT

Chicago, Sept. 17. Max Baer, the world's heavyweight champion, is more interested at the moment in having a good time than in fighting in defence of his title, which he probably will do in June, 1935. Baer is touring the country.

appearing on the stage in various cities. He sings a little, dances a little and talks a lot. When his act is over he goes out where the lights burn brightly at night.

He told friends here of an incident in New York that greatly amused him. He was in a night club. Two drunken men got in a fight. One of them was knocked down and Baer stepped in his place and said to the other:

LIKES CHAMPAGNE BEST.

"Buddy, please don't hit me. I only bought you a drink."

"That had the place in an uproar," Baer continued. "The fellow didn't know who I was and passed three or four blows at me, and finally stumbled out of the door after missing one. You should have heard everyone howl."

Very little talking about fighting comes from Baer. He is interested largely in 16-cylinder automobiles, society people, and says he doesn't drink much.

"I like champagne best. I never get tight (drunk). Sometimes I get to feeling good," he said.

Baer will wind up his tour on the Pacific Coast where he is due to make another picture.—United Press.

LAWN BOWLS TITLE IN THE BALANCE

KOWLOON BOWLING GREEN'S LAST CHANCE TO-MORROW

CRAIGENGOWER STRONGLY PLACED FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

The championship of the first division of the lawn bowls league will probably be decided to-morrow. Kowloon Bowling Green, challengers to the Craigen-gower "A" for the leadership, play their last match of the season, visiting Kowloon Docks.

Defeat would make the title a certainty for Craigen-gower, who have two matches outstanding, including one against their own club colleagues to-morrow. They are almost bound to avenge their defeat of the early part of the season.

Kowloon Bowling Green can still remain in the limelight if they win at the Docks. The onus would then be on Craigen-gower to win their last match, which is against the Police.

The programme and some of the fixtures for to-morrow:

YESTERDAY

The following reports on the New York stock market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz: The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's markets: Stocks were irregular and listless, pending a definite indication of the trend. The market was featured by the strength of railroad issues, due to anticipated favourable carloading figures. Silver issues were earlier, probably due to the fact that several companies had raised wages, which would mean smaller dividends. Bonds were firm, featured by another rally in United States Government issues, especially Home-owners and Farm Corps. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregular. Wheat prices advanced, due to the sharp rally in the Liverpool market, plus unfavourable weather conditions in Canada, S. C. and F. New York office cables—

The stock trend was mixed and changes were moderate in a dull session. News is not inspiring, but sentiment has improved. The Chrysler Motor Co. is retiring bonds to the value of $10,000,000. The Public Service of Jersey's August net income totalled $1,176,000, against $1,736,000 in August last year. The Consolidated Oil Co. has declared a dividend of 14 cents per share, compared with 28 cents per share paid in April. Business done: 300,000.

New York & Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz:—

Cotton: The market was steadier on slack offerings rather than on demand and also owing to some hope of a settlement of the textile situation. Movements were narrow and easily influenced by any news. Liquidation of October cotton continues.

Grains: The wheat market responded to the improvement in the foreign markets, while corn responded to the report of freezing conditions in the North-West. Neither the wheat nor the corn markets appear to be in the position to show any sustained advance for the present. Better Liverpool cables favour higher prices. The market appears to be oversold.

Rubber: The market was very steady on Trade buying and looks better. Sugar: There is no change in conditions. Dow-Jones Averages:

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE
THEATRES

Low Ayres has the enviable task of making love to Alice Faye in "She Learned About Sailors," the Fox comedy-romance coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday. Low is the champion heart-breaker of the U. S. Navy and Alice is a night club entertainer in the picture. This gives Alice a splendid opportunity to sing "Here's the Key to My Heart" in a manner that is reminiscent of her "Nasty Men" number in George White's "Scandals." Aiding and abetting these two with the comedy are those knockout slapstick artists, Mitchell and Durant, who are Lew's shipmates in the picture, and Harry Green, a South American impresario. The story takes them from an Asiatic port, through the vicissitudes of life on shipboard to a cafe in San Pedro, California. Mitchell and Durant set the stage for an accidental meeting of the lovers in Los Angeles, and when something goes wrong, they face both lovers into a trumped-up marriage. There then follows a series of hilarious events that brings the film to a lively conclusion.

"Tarzan and His Mate"

Drama that appeals to the eye can be as forceful as drama that appeals to the intellect. In fact, the eye is the inlet to the brain just as is the ear. Which principle, according to Cedric Gibbons, famous art director, who now makes his debut as a director of drama, makes possible the use of a vast amount of pictorial knowledge to embellish the thrills and romance of "Tarzan and His Mate" now adventure picture now showing at the Queen's Theatre. For years Gibbons' business has been the art of "dramatising" buildings, rooms, landscapes—designing the sets for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. Sometimes he designed settings in subdued hues and quiet tones, so as not to intrude on the spoken drama. At other times he designed flamboyant settings or garish spectacle that themselves told a story. For years he has made an intensive study of fitting his settings to his drama; his achievement ranges from the huge settings of "Ben Hur" to the intensely dramatic settings of "Grand Hotel." He recently created the "house made out of a barn" for "When Ladies Meet," Gibbons has studied drama of the screen with settings primarily in view, and eventually has come to unconsciously link the dramatization of eye-appeal and reason-appeal together. In his first picture with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan and Neil Hamilton, the original triangle in "Tarzan, the Ape Man" re-enacted in a sequel to Edgar Rice Burroughs' jungle thriller, he has worked out a number of novel ideas along this line. Paul Cavanagh, Doris Lloyd, William Stack, Desmond Roberts and Nathan Curry are also in the cast.

"It Happened One Night" which is now showing in the King's Theatre, might possibly have emerged as anything but the grand entertainment it really is, is a prospect hardly compatible with the film's great cast, story and great director. How, for instance, could the picture fall to "click" in the parlance of the studios, with Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, co-starred together for the first time on the screen, in the leading roles, with Frank Capra directing, the same Capra that gave motion pictures "Lady For A Day," "American Madness" and "Platinum Blonde," with Robert Riskin writing the screen play based on the "Comopolitan Magazine" story by Samuel Hopkins Adams. It was, evidently, to be expected that "It Happened One Night" would rank high among the year's best. That it has surpassed even the most ambitious estimates is a tribute to the fine acting of the two stars, the direction of Capra, Riskin's sparkling script and the elaborate production afforded it by the Columbia Studios. The supporting cast, as in every Capra-directed picture is excellent. Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Alan Hale, Blanche Frederici, Ward Bond, Mickey Daniels, George Breakston, Father Dodi and Irving Bacon are all to be seen and even the minor bits are played by seasoned and experienced trouper. "It Happened One Night" can be listed as the best picture Gable has done; the best picture Colbert has done, and the best picture Capra has done.

"Wonder Bar"

A near approach to a motion picture musical number has been attempted in "Goin' To Heaven on a Mule," which Al Jolson sings in the First National screen version of "Wonder Bar," which will be shown at the Alhambra Theatre to-morrow, according to Harry Warren and Al Dubin, composer and lyricist of that Warner Bros. musical spectacle. Both in its musical treatment and in its screen presentation, they say, the number is unique. They mention it as the most interesting, at least to them, of the five songs they created for the production. "It's in the 'Jolson tradition' and at the same time it's more modernistic than the Chicago Fair," said Warren. "It's a sort of semi-spiritual." Another of their Jolson items to be used in the film is "The Lub Trench" with which he entertains the guests of this enormous continental night club from the floor. Adds from the five original Warren and Dubin numbers, Jolson will revive "Dark Eyes," of his previous song successes, in somewhat new guises. "Wonder Bar" is the internationally famous musical drama with spectacular numbers created and staged by Busby Berkeley, which 300 beautiful girls take part. Others in the all star girls take part. Others in the all star Louis Fazenda and Bill O'Drury.

"PACK OF LIES"FATHER AND SON
REBUKED

"How dare you come to this court with a pack of lies, and swear away that man's liberty; you are the worst pair of liars I have ever seen!" said Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy, this morning, commenting on the evidence given by Tong Fuk, 46 years of age, the master of the Fuk Kee timber yard in Anchor Street, and his 22-year-old son, Au Wun, when they charged Chan Pui, a 38-year-old street coolie, with stealing two pieces of wood.

The complainant, Tong Fuk, stated in his evidence that when he opened the door of his shop, at 4.30 a.m., on September 20, he saw defendant carrying away on his shoulder two pieces of wood, which he had stolen from the front of the shop. He pursued him, and, with the aid of his foki, caught him and took him to the police station.

The foki then gave evidence and said that he had watched the defendant for half an hour, and saw him walk past the shop three times. The third time defendant passed, he picked up two pieces of wood and made off. The foki then alleged that he opened the door and gave chase.

Defendant was discharged and the complainant and witness were severely rebuked.

should be able to live in peace and quietness.

The Crown case was that the noise was continued or resumed almost aggressively after warning had been given. The noise was such that the words could be heard at least five hundred yards away by Mr. King. The noise was not an ordinary noise, having regard to the fact that it occurred in the only district in which, so far as Mr. Holmes was aware, public tranquillity was enforced. The hearing is continuing.

him in a cemetery last March.—United Press.

FIRST CLUE.

New York, Sept. 20. A $10 gold certificate, presented for payment for petrol at a Bronx garage, was the first clue which led to the arrest of Hauptmann. The manager of the garage jotted down the number of the car and hurried to the bank, where the certificate was identified as one of the ransom notes.

The Attorney General's Department has indicated that it will move swiftly to prosecute Hauptmann on a charge of murder and kidnapping. An official added, however, that the severe penalties for kidnappers would not apply in this case since the law imposing them was not enacted until after the abduction of the Lindbergh baby.

MAKE NO COMMENT.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, who are in California, would make no comment when informed of the arrest of Hauptmann and of the police suspicions.—Reuter.

NOTES IDENTIFIED.

Washington, Sept. 20. Police have arrested a man named Hauptmann in whose home were found $13,750 in ten and twenty-dollar bank notes, known to be part of the original $50,000 ransom paid by Colonel Charles Lindbergh during the search for his kidnapped baby.

Hauptmann is an alien, having come to the United States in 1923 as stowaway.

NATIONAL SENSATION.

The arrest of Hauptmann in the Bronx district has caused a sensation throughout the country. A crowd of six hundred gathered outside Hauptmann's house, and police supervision was needed to keep it in control.

Hauptmann had told his neighbors that he was a cabinet-maker who had been out of work for two years, but neighbors say he went to a Wall Street broker's office daily.

A taxi-driver has identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a dollar to deliver a note to Dr. Condon's home soon after the latter was announced as a negotiator.—Reuter.

RESTAURANT FIRESMART WORK BY BRIGADE

Fire broke out on the first floor of 83 Nanchung Street, Shamshui-po, at 3.40 this morning. The premises were occupied by the Tung Po Restaurant.

Smoke was issuing in dense volume from the rear portion of the premises, when an alarm communicated to the main station at Kowloon brought a number of engines on the scene.

The outbreak was confined to the floor, and within half-an-hour it was extinguished. Considerable damage to furniture and goods was caused, however, an estimate by the proprietor placing it at over $700.

murder, and the finding of the little body on the Lindbergh estate many days after the child was snatched from the nursery, of Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh's home, shocked all America and the consequent nationwide hunt for the abductors was the most widespread and enormously organised in the history of the country.

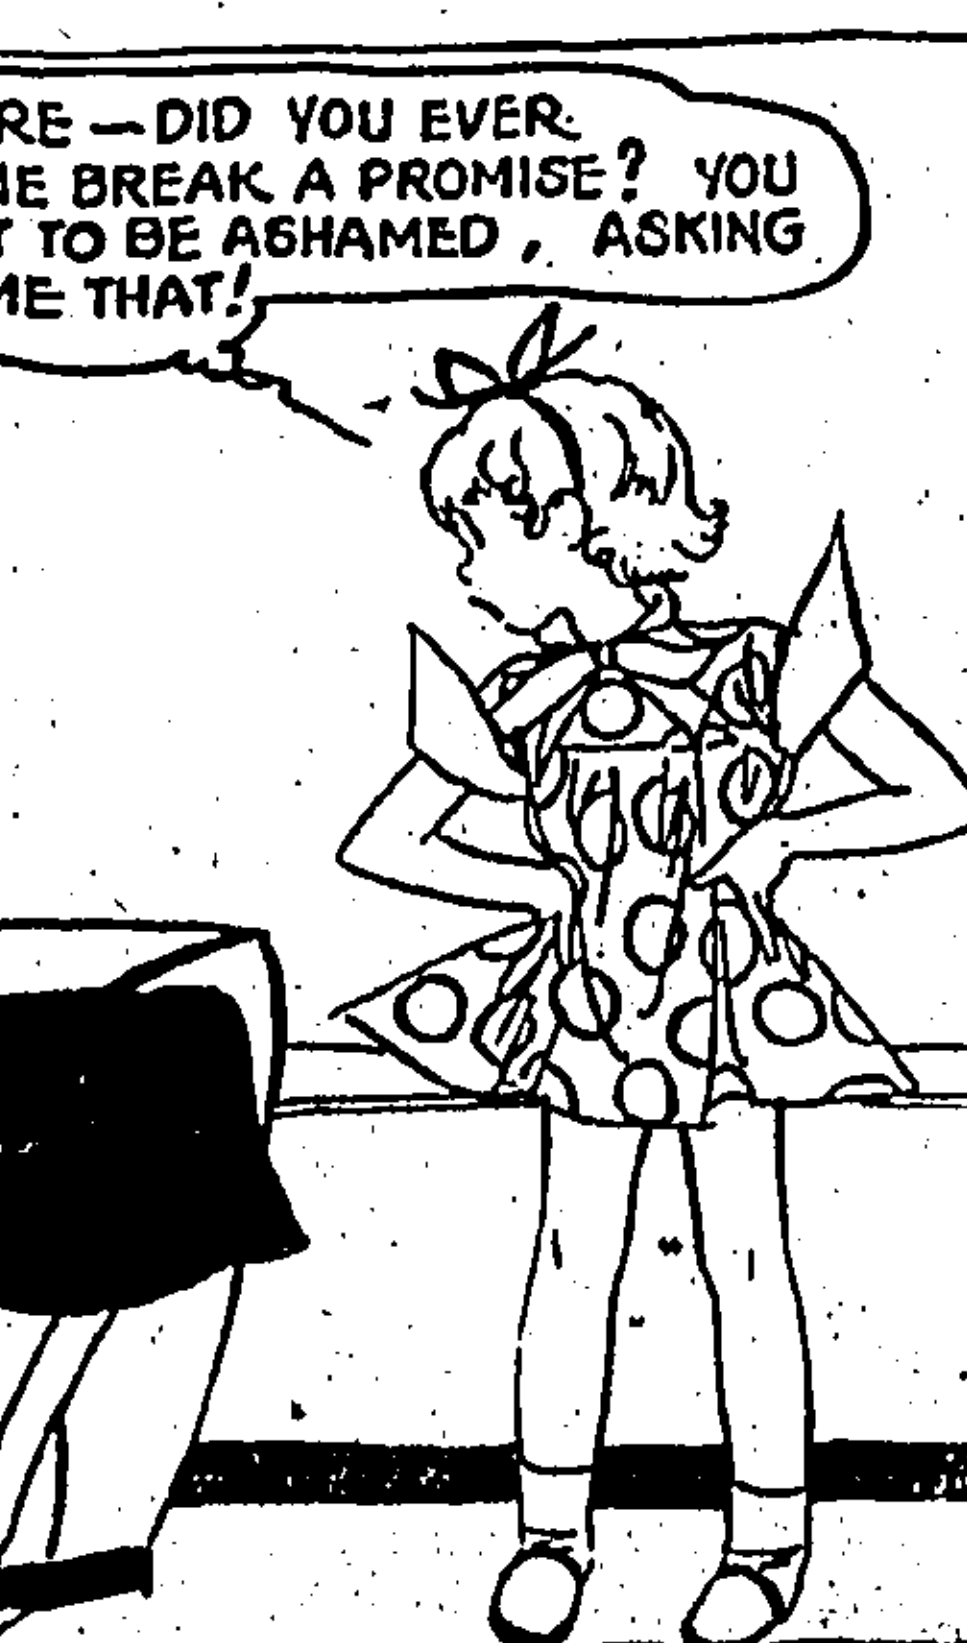

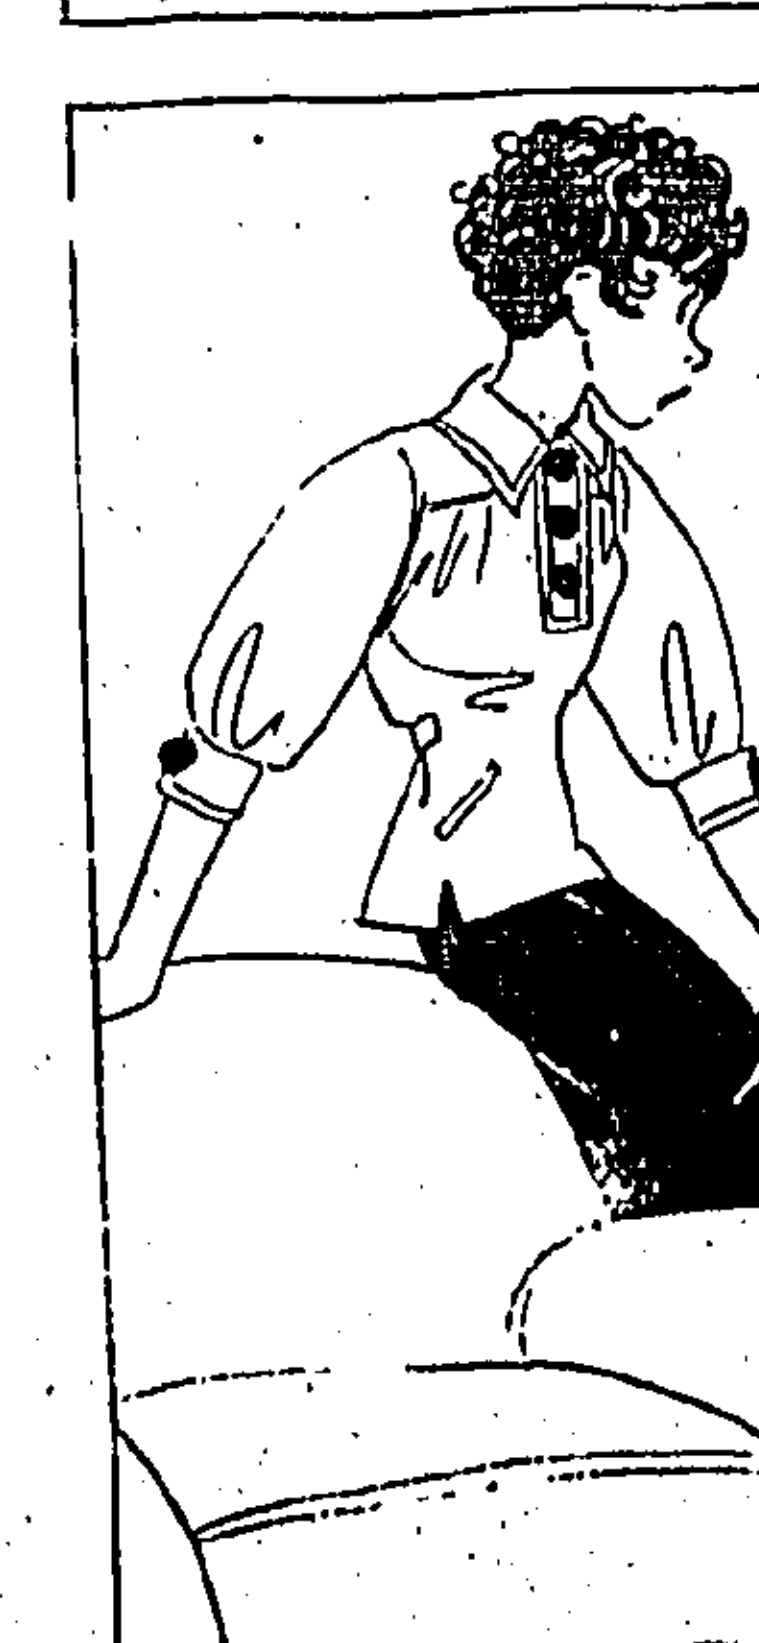

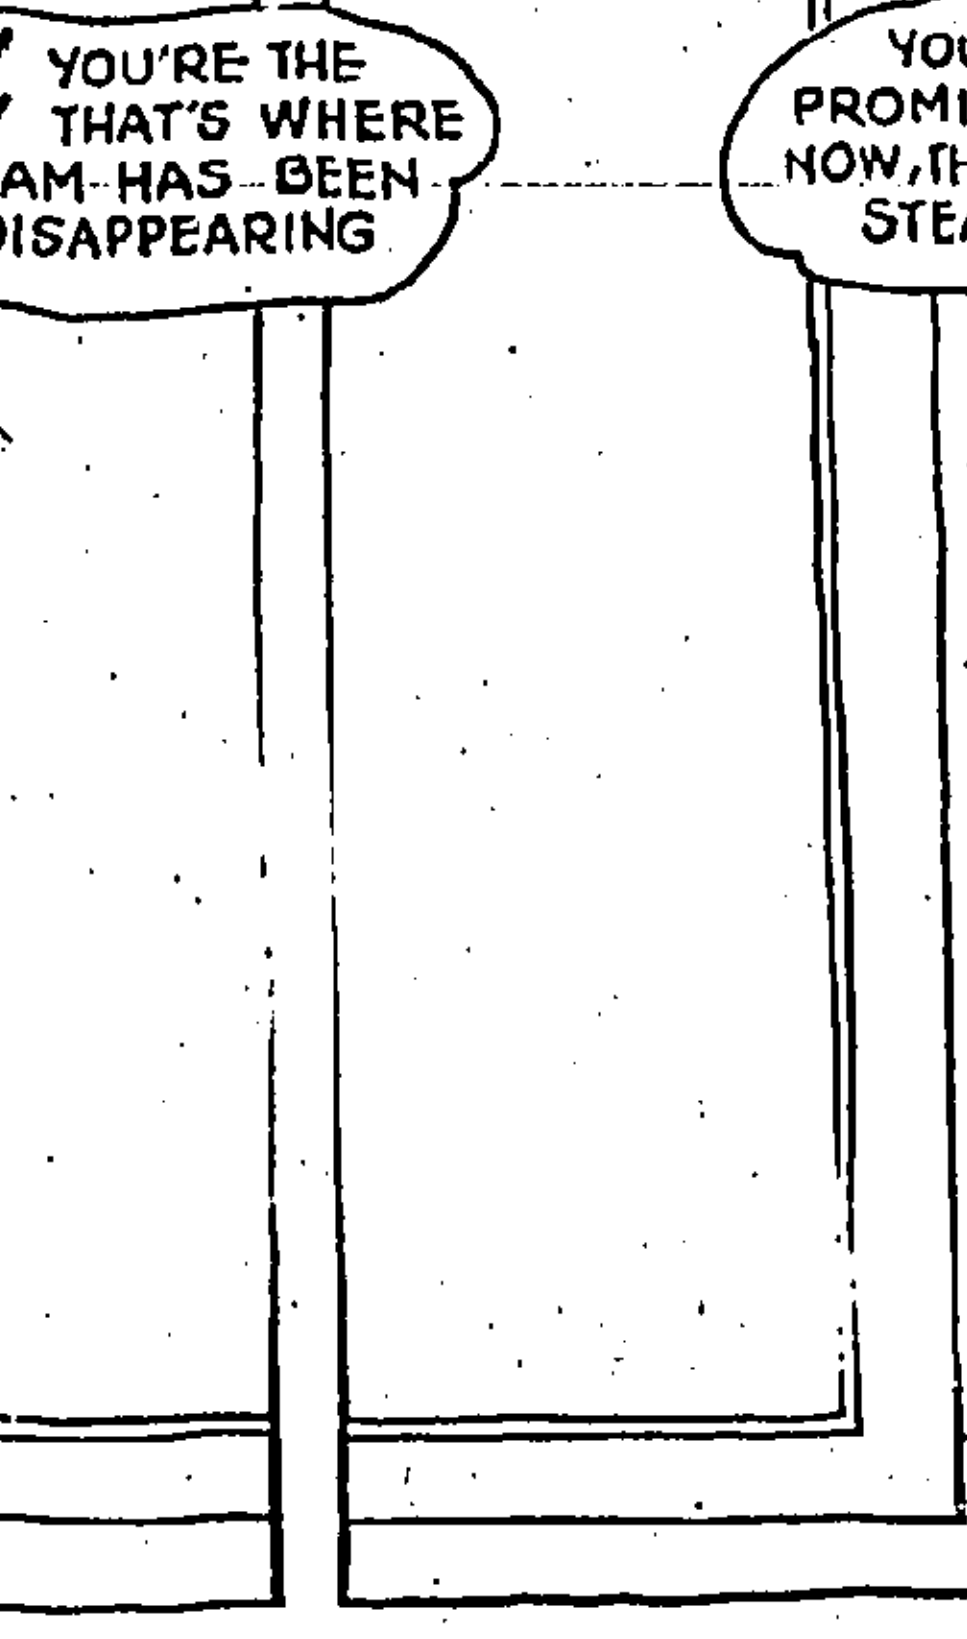

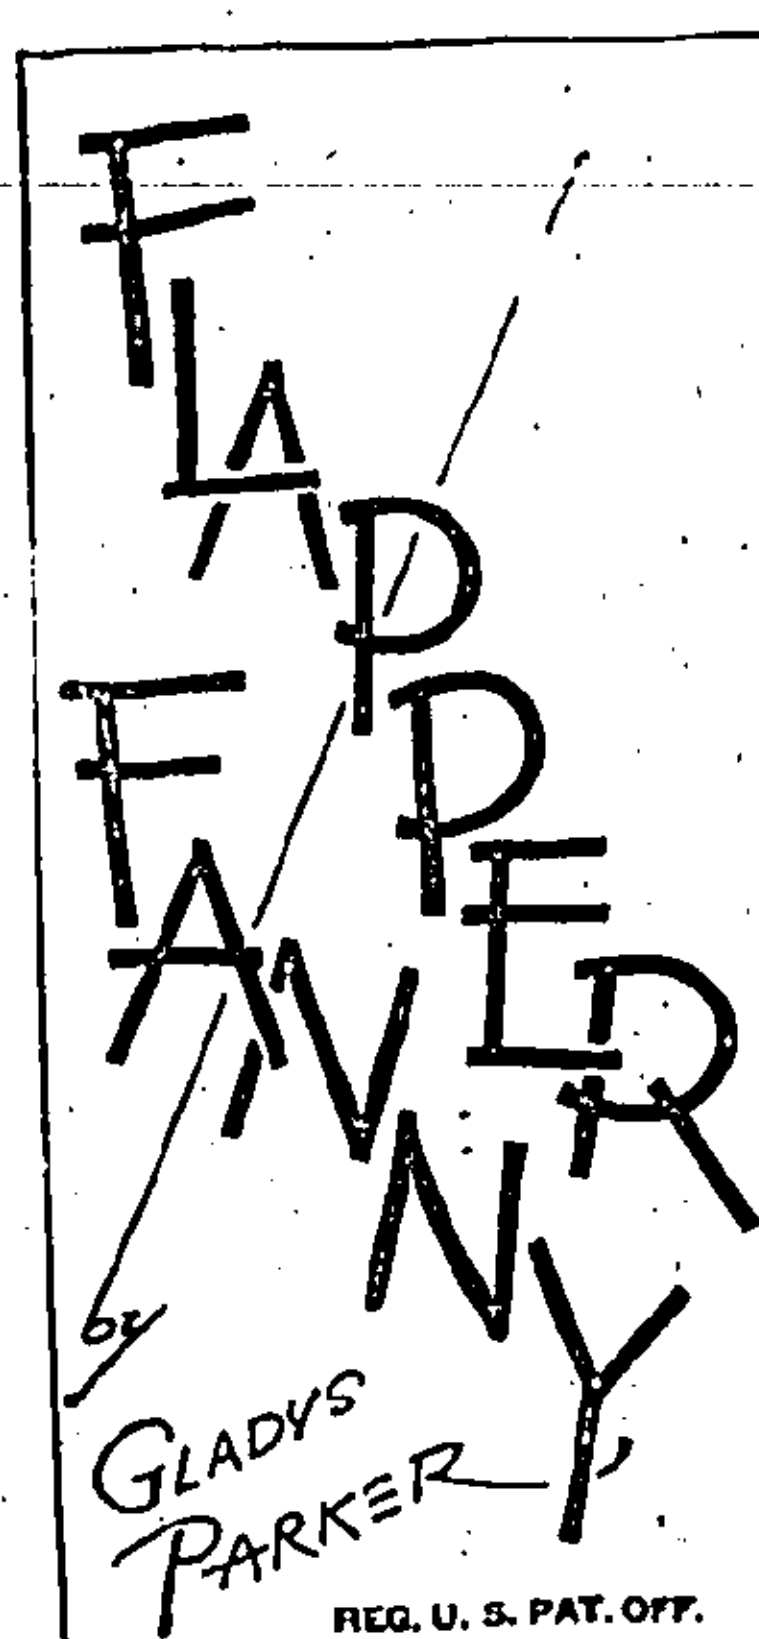

The child was asleep in its crib in the Lindbergh's Hopewell, New Jersey home, when it was stolen. The muddled marks of moosehoof feet indicated that someone had entered the nursery through the window by a roughly-made ladder. Colonel Lindbergh, when he discovered the loss, called on the police at once and the news was flashed to every police station in the United States.

Three days after the child's disappearance, a note demanding $50,000 ransom was received by the frantic family, which informed them that although the child was safe it would be killed if anything "went wrong." Within a few hours, a man called Colonel Lindbergh on the telephone, said he was one of the kidnappers and discussed the terms of the ransom. A meeting-place was arranged where the money was to be paid over.

RANSOM PAID.

It was on March 1 that child was kidnapped, but it was not until April, and after further lengthy negotiations with the criminals, that Colonel Lindbergh, having requested the police not to intervene, paid $50,000 through intermediaries to the gang. The notes were in fifty-dollar denominations. But the child was not returned.

On June 12 the baby's body was found in the grounds of the Lindbergh estate. The skull was fractured and the death had occurred some weeks before. Many arrests were made, but the crime was never brought home to any one of those taken into custody.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

By MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

BOOTS RABURN, 18 and pretty, tries not to be jealous of the other members of her crowd at Larcheck. Sylvia Rivers, richest girl in town, dangles Boots and falls in love with her at the Beach Club. Boots accepts a last-minute invitation from MISS WATERMAN, socially prominent, to a dinner at the club that same night.

Quite innocently, Boots is thrown into an embarrassing situation by HARDY WHITE, MORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking. He tries to induce Boots to go sailing with him and, when she runs away, goes off in a boat alone and falls overboard. His rescue causes considerable excitement and Sylvia is furious. She maliciously repeats the story to MISS FERNELL, who asks Boots to resign from the Juniors.

Hardy calls to apologise to Boots. He asks her to "go places" that evening and Boots, hurt and defiant, tells him she'd like to go to "The Barn"—a questionable dance resort.

CHAPTER V

Sylvia flicked the ash from her cigarette. The hand holding it trembled a little. Sylvia wore a huge emerald on her third finger; against the sunburned skin it burned like an evil eye.

"I don't know what you're talking about," she said languidly. Isabel faced her squarely. The crisp red curls on Isabel's small head fairly crackled.

"I think you do," Isabel said sturdily. "Mrs. Fernell saw you that day. She sent for Boots. And now Boots is—out," she finished, spreading her small fingers apart in an expressive gesture.

"And so what does that make me?" Sylvia wanted to know, with insolence.

"You know as well as I do, Sylvia Rivers," said Isabel hotly. "That Boots Raburn hadn't a thing in the world to do with Hardy's being tight that night. He'd had a lot before he arrived at your table. He had some more there—"

"Am I denying that?" Sylvia inquired, squinting through smoke, smiling ever so faintly. "No, my dear, your little girl friend's big mistake was in going out on the boat with him—getting herself talked about." "I said Sylvia coldly and aloofly, "had nothing to do with that."

"She didn't go with him and you know it. They went out on the porch."

"And after that," Sylvia finished with a laugh that was like the flick of a whip, "after that she remembered nothing. Oh, I know that girl. I've heard it before."

Isabel sprang to her feet, flushing deeply.

"You're perfectly hateful, Hardy admits Boots wouldn't go with him on the boat. He grabbed her and she got away."

"And she didn't turn up at the party again that night," interrupted Sylvia. "I know. I know." She cast up her eyes in assumed innocence.

"If you let Boots suffer for this you and I are through as friends," Isabel said. She knew when she was beaten. There was no use trying to appeal to Sylvia.

"Dear, dear, how melodramatic the child is," murmured Sylvia. "Come around some day when the weather isn't so hot and perhaps you'll feel differently." She dropped her air of studied insolence and now spoke almost coaxingly to the other girl.

"Snap out of it, Isabel. I haven't a thing to do with this. If Boots has been indiscreet that's her business. Why I'd be glad to talk to Mrs. Fernell about it—ask her to give Boots another chance."

"You would? Honestly?" "Yes, only that—only that Boots went to the Barn last night with Hardy and John Fernell saw her there. It's all," finished Sylvia in a tone of gentle regret, "all over town this morning."

"I don't believe it," Isabel knew what Mrs. Raburn thought about the Barn. Not that anything shocking had ever happened there—only the nicest girls in Larcheck didn't go there, usually.

"We simply must patch the whole thing up," Isabel insisted.

"Really!" she said, disposing of Boots and cousin Marion all in one breath.

"And I think Hardy is terribly interested in her, if you ask me," Isabel flared, annoyed at the other's air. "Why wouldn't he be?"

"Well, that's perfectly sweet of you, dear," murmured Sylvia with the tolerant air of one humoring a lunatic. So Isabel went away, leaving a puzzled and worried Boots behind her.

Boots had gone to the Barn with Hardy, on the heels of being asked to resign from the Juniors, that was the supreme gesture of defiance. All the Juniors knew Mrs. Fernell's attitude on the subject of the Barn. It was all right, of course, for John Fernell, but the girls under Mrs. Fernell's leadership in the Juniors understood the tact ban on the place.

Boots' attitude, when Isabel saw her, puzzled her further. This was Isabel Boots, cool, enigmatic, untouchable. It was funny, resigning from the club, wasn't it? She wanted to know. Silly outfit, anyway. She had never liked it. Everybody was so stuffy.

But next year's dances, Isabel began, appalled. "Why, we simply must patch the whole thing up! It's all so stupid. You want to go to the Thanksgiving dance, don't you?"

Boots smiled a faraway smile and said she hadn't the faintest idea. Isabel began to go to the Thanksgiving dance, don't you?"

suburban interior. Boots liked to go there.

"Hello, there," Frances put down the story she had been reading and beckoned to her. "I hear you're housekeeper. Come and have lunch with us to-day. We'll love it."

Boots perched on the arm of the battered wicker armchair. "I adore to. Sure you want me?"

There was something challenging about her tone and Frances George elevated an inquiring eyebrow. "What do you mean? Of course, we do."

Boots shrugged her pretty shoulders. "The old ladies are after my scalp. I'm no longer a member of the Larcheck Juniors."

"Oh, that!" Frances laughed cheerfully. "Well, I don't see how you stood it as long as you did. You'll be dead long enough."

"You don't understand," Boots went on with a sort of gay defiance. "I was asked to resign."

The young woman in the blue print frock frowned. "What do you suppose I care?" she demanded. "Tell me about it if you want to, but it doesn't matter in the least."

She rose from her chair at a shriek from one of the small red-suited figures. The boy-child was belabouring the girl-child with a shovel.

"I must rescue Gwen from the fiend," she said casually, to the utter scandal of two ladies nearby, gossiping over their needlepoint. "See you later. Chow at one."

Boots went toward the bathhouses with her head held high. It gave her a lift to have the matter of her disgrace taken so casually. Maybe she wasn't outside the pale completely, after all.

But as she passed a group of young people at the showers several heads were turned aside curiously. Judith Devlin, whom she had known rather well at school, looked straight through—looked beyond her.

"Come along," Judith said to some unseen companion in her clear, pleasant voice. She ignored Boots completely.

The girl went on to her cubicle, her heart beating fast, her blood racing. So it was to be war to the knife, was it? She would show them how much—how little she cared!

HAVEN OF REFUGE.

HUNAN REDS CROSS TO KWEICHOW

Canton, Sept. 20.

It is learned in official circles that the Reds, who recently invaded Southern Hunan, have slipped into Kweichow Province, apparently for the purpose of avoiding pressure from the combined Kwangtung and Kwangsi armies.

The Kwangsi military authorities have ordered two divisions of Kwangsi troops, now stationed on the Kwangsi-Hunan border, to move into Kweichow immediately in order to assist the Kweichow Government to suppress the Communists.—Central News Agency.

LABOUR REFORMS

PLAN TO AVOID CONFLICT

U.S. TEXTILE PROBLEM

Washington, Sept. 20. President Roosevelt's Mediation Board has recommended the creation of an impartial Textile Labour Relations Board of three members to handle all textile industry disputes between employers and employees.

The Board recommended, further, that a Federal Trade Commission should study the question of wages in the industry.

It proposes that the impartial body of three should regulate the practice of increasing the machine-load of individual workers and that such increases should be banned until February.

The Board earnestly hopes that the present strike will be called off and that the employers will re-engage the strikers without discrimination.—Reuter.

RECENT SHOOTING INCIDENT

JAPANESE FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

The shooting incident in Wanchai in the early hours of the morning of September 12 had a sequel at the Central Magistracy before Mr. E. W. Hamilton this morning when Ikuzo Nomuro, a Japanese, was charged with (a) shooting with intent to kill, main or disfigure at No. 87 Jaffe Road, on September 12, and (b) possession of a shot gun and 16 cartridges without a licence on the same date.

Detective Inspector M. Murphy applied for a formal remand of one week which was granted. It is alleged that defendant went to the top floor of No. 87 Jaffe Road at 1 a.m. on the day in question and tried to shoot his wife through a peep hole. She was staying at that address with some friends.

Postponement Of Fourth Race

Newport, Sept. 20. It has been found necessary to postpone the fourth of the America's Cup races. Mr. Sopwith asked for a respite, to which he is entitled according to the rules of the contest, in order to make repairs to his winches which are used to set the Genoa jib.—Reuter.

SOVIET'S LEAGUE ENTRY

WELCOMED BY DR. W. W. YEN

Tientsin, Sept. 21. Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese Ambassador to Moscow, who is staying here, in a statement to the press expressing his attitude on the latest international developments, said Russia's entry into the League of Nations would bring an important change in the Far East situation as any aggressor State in the East would undoubtedly be closely watched morally, legally and politically.

Moreover, the Soviet's entry and her appointment as a permanent member on the League Council would also increase her prestige.

On receipt of the news, Dr. Yen immediately sent a message to M. Litvinoff congratulating him on his diplomatic successes.—Central News.

Charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on three counts of theft of ten feet of electric cable, property of the P.W.D., from a fenced area in Avenue Street; attempted theft of five feet of electric cable from the same place and possession of a pair of pliers and a saw for an unlawful purpose, Chan Fuk, unemployed, was sentenced to two months' hard labour on the first count, and one month on the second charge, and his plea was accepted by Detective Sergeant Fitches.

Germany Denies Arms Purchases

NONSENSICAL CHARGE AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Sept. 20.

Further sweeping denials of testimony given to the Senate Committee investigating munitions contracts here, were made to-day when Herr Luther, the German Ambassador, visited the office of the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull.

Herr Luther recalled the evidence of aeroplane manufacturing company officials to the effect that America, in contravention of the Treaty of Versailles, was selling military planes to Germany. He declared the allegations that Germany had purchased such equipment were no more than nonsense.

JAPAN'S ENTERPRISE

The determination of the Japanese Government to keep abreast of inventions in the United States, was described by a witness at the inquiry to-day.

The witness declared that the Japanese obtained the patent numbers through commercial houses and arranged to have the patents copied in the Patent Office.—Reuter.

HARBOUR WORKS

HAICHOW SCHEME COMPLETED
